Split Party Decision May Settle Future Of Filibuster

Close Senate Vote Foreseen as Cloture Petition Promises Action on Debate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A split party decision, so close that a few votes either way may determine the future of Senate filibusters, was indicated last night as the Senate bogged down in a Southern talkathon.

A cloture petition, to be circulated today by Administration leaders and probably filed in the Senate Thursday, may clear the way for a short-cut decision on the marathon Senate debate.

The test vote hinged on these two "ifs":

1. That Vice President Alben Barkley will rule cloture applies to a motion to call up the anti-filibuster rules change. (Barkley has told no one how he will rule.)

2. That the Senate will override a contrary ruling last session by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and sustain Barkley's finding.

Question Bothering GOP

The second question already is giving Senate Republicans a lot of trouble. They are trying to decide whether or not to support Vandenberg's ruling. They will talk it over at a Senate GOP policy meeting today, and a full Senate Republican conference may be called later this week to discuss it.

Senator Vandenberg himself is expected to take the floor in the next few days to defend his original finding that the Senate cannot shut off debate on a motion to call up a bill.

In the same speech, Vandenberg may free Republican colleagues from any obligation to support his rules stand on grounds of "personal loyalty." He told friends the rules scrap isn't a "popularity contest" between himself and Vice President Barkley.

Up to Republicans

Whether the filibuster will be swiftly broken, or run on indefinitely, imperiling key Truman bills, will depend in the show-down on how Republicans vote.

Senate Democrats already are split down the middle, with the 21 Southerners at least certain to support an appeal from the expected ruling by Barkley.

A Senate GOP leader said last night that Senate Republicans, while overwhelmingly in favor of a permanent change in Senate rules, are as badly split as Democrats on any "short-cut" decision from the Senate chair.

He predicted the Senate vote on such a ruling will be "very, very close."

Toy in Throat Causes Death of Bethesda Baby

A 5-month-old Bethesda infant yesterday suffocated while she was playing in her playpen. The county medical examiner said she fell forward, forcing a baby's rattle down her throat.

She was Deborah Grieves, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Grieves, of 4808 Middlesex la., Bethesda. Grieves is an assistant director of the Bureau of the Census.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, ascribed the death to asphyxia due to suffocation.

Deborah was found unconscious in the pen at about 3:30 p. m. by the Grieves' maid, Elizabeth Key, of 828 23d st. nw. The rattle was clutched in the child's hand.

Police described the rattle as having a stem about 3 inches long, with knobs on either end.

Mrs. Grieves and the maid took the child to Suburban Hospital at about 4 p. m. She was pronounced dead shortly before 5 p. m. by Dr. I. W. Pearlman, staff physician, after oxygen treatments failed to revive her.

Accused Slayer Reenacts Fairfax Murders . . .

HOW HIS WIFE WAS SHOT—Charles Francis Holober (right), 40-year-old jeweler, points a toy pistol at the back of Detective Sergt. Joseph Howard's head and shows Fairfax police how he shot and killed his wife, Frances, 37, as she stooped over beside the Green Forest nudist camp lodge Thursday. Detective Sergt. Cecil E. Brown stands beside Holober, who was charged Monday with two counts of murder. Sergt. Lewis Shumate (left) watches. After fatally shooting his wife, Holober buried his 8-month-old daughter alive with her in the same shallow grave, police said he confessed.

N. Y. Jurors Handpicked, Says Judge

Voting Lists Were Not Satisfactory, Senior Member of U. S. Bench Testifies

New York, March 1 (AP).—Federal Judge John C. Knox, called as a witness by the defense in the trial of 11 high United States Communists, testified today Federal jurors here are "handpicked."

However, Judge Knox insisted that he has sought representatives of every economic and social group in the community" on juries here.

The defense superaed Knox, senior judge of the Southern District of New York, as a part of its challenge to the jury system which has held back start of the actual trial of the Communist leaders for six weeks.

Judge Knox said he decided several years ago that the method of jury selection in this district needed revision.

"I thought I needed a more careful selection of jurors," he testified.

Sources Are Listed

He said his "handpicked" method consisted of using names from such sources as the Social Register, Who's Who in New York, lists of college alumni, and lists submitted by large business firms.

Judge Harold R. Medina, named by Judge Knox to preside at the trial, listened intently as Knox began his testimony.

The defense charges that the jury-picking method discriminates in favor of wealthy persons and against Negroes, women, laborers, persons of low income and others.

The Communist leaders are charged with conspiracy to advocate forcible overthrow of the Government.

Last Day for Challenge

By Medina's order, this was the last day for presentation of evidence by the defense in its jury challenge.

Judge Knox testified he had told a House of Representatives' committee in 1945 that an effort was made at one time to select jurors through voting lists.

This, he said, resulted in calling of many prospective jurors who could neither speak nor understand the English language. Many others, he added, "were proprietors of one-man business enterprises and to whom jury service would mean ruination."

Knox replied affirmatively when asked by a defense attorney if he once had said there were large numbers of "Negroes, immigrants and whatnot" in this district and that "if you went out with a dragnet" to choose jurors, "you might come up with a result no one might wish."

Criminals Held "Nuerous"

Medina then asked the witness: "Is there a large criminal population in the City of New York?"

"Quite a number, I should think," the senior jurist replied.

A defense lawyer then asked Knox whether he knew of any manual workers, except those working for several specific corporations, who had been picked as grand jurors.

Medina sustained an objection to this question, commenting that he did not know how a judge could tell by looking at a jury whether its members were manual workers or not.

Later in the day Judge Medina brought to a halt defense challenges to the jury selection system.

"The case is closed," he said. He previously has ordered that the actual trial start next Monday.

The challenges have delayed selection of a jury since the trial opened January 17.

Funds Cut for More Employes In Treasury and Postoffice

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Sharp cutbacks in funds for additional employes in the Treasury and Postoffice Departments were made yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

As a general policy, the committee tried to hold the agencies to their present number of employes in reporting out an $11,333,627,586 supply bill for the two major departments for the 1950 fiscal year starting July 1.

In direct annual appropriations, the Treasury would get $1,027,608,403, a cut of $65,386,046 from budget requests. The $2,045,209,500 recommended for the postal service was $34,362,800 less than the President requested. Treasury also would get $8,260,809,683 in fixed-charge permanent appropriations to pay interest on the public debt, etc.

This is how individual Treasury agencies would be affected by the committee action:

INTERNAL REVENUE: It was limited to an increase of 1500 employes. To add more than 7000 employes as the agency had requested, the committee reported, would be to approach the "point of diminishing returns" in tax collections. The agency is hiring 1950 additional employes this year. Commissioner George Schoeneman said that every dollar invested in enforcement personnel would be returned many times in additional taxes. None of the increased staff would be in headquarters here. The committee cut Revenue's budget by $12,268,000.

BEP: The committee slashed the budget of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing here by two million dollars. The agency wanted the money to hire 400 additional highly-skilled employes. The committee suggested that present BEP employes be put on overtime to get out the production.

TAX RESEARCH: Funds to hire four new employes in this office was rejected . . . GENERAL COUNSEL: It asked for 12 new jobs. The committee okayed funds for only four . . . ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES: A slash of $100,000 would force this office to lay off between 30 and 40 employes here.

BUREAU OF ACCOUNTS: A reduction of $90,000 for it. The committee emphasized that the reduction wasn't to apply to the cooperative Treasury-Budget Bureau-General Accounting Office

Requests Trimmed To $98,923,621 in Bill Ignoring Sales Tax, Pay Rise Plan

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A $4,397,806 slice was taken out of the Commissioners' "austerity" budget program yesterday by orders of the House Appropriations Committee.

The committee then sent to the floor for House action today a $98,923,621 appropriation bill to run the District for the 12 months starting July 1.

The committee budget plan did not touch upon the taxation and spending changes that may materialize in this Congress as the result of pending legislation. It suggested that any deficit (the committee trimmed it to $2.5 millions) could be covered by higher property taxes by order of the Commissioners. It made no allowance for proposed District pay raises or for a sales tax that would cover pay boost costs.

Strayer Report Ignored

Similarly, the budget plan treated schools without notice of the Strayer recommendation for a 38-million-dollar school building program to be financed with Federal loans. No money was voted for day-care centers, or administering District rent control. Main reason for these actions is the fact that the Appropriations group can work only on the basis of existing law, not on the basis of pending legislation.

Among the major effects of the committee budget cuts were these:

1. No move could be made to increase the cost-of-living basis for relief clients from 1942 levels now in use to the 1946 levels proposed by city officials.

2. A $400,000 cut in police and fire retirement funds could lead to reduced pension payments unless restored.

3. Funds totaling $1,187,399 appropriated in other years for building Spingarn High School for Negro youths were ordered returned to the District general funds, but a $2,505,000 contract authorization for the project, too small by more than a million dollars to get the work going, was allowed to remain on the law books.

Sewer Funds Cut

4. Sewer building funds were cut by $1,149,200 in the face of a backlog of needed sewer improvements estimated by city officials at some 20 million dollars.

The total budget cut closely matched the amount the Commissioners have asked Congress to add to the Federal payment to the District for next year. The payment is now 12 millions. The Commissioners had urged that it go to 16 million dollars at least for

'Strike It Rich' Winner Settles Taxes for 8 Here

Thanks to Harold M. Kiesel, of 6817 Georgia ave. nw., and the Columbia Broadcasting System program "Strike It Rich," the Federal revenuers won't have to worry about the taxes of eight Washington men, come March 15. The program was broadcast locally by WTOP.

Kiesel's expenses to New York for the broadcast were paid by seven Washington men, all employes of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Kiesel said. Their hope was for Kiesel to win enough on the give-away program to pay all their taxes—totalling $646.43.

The payoff question was: I'm a Bourbon headed for home. My country is separated from Switzerland by the Jura Mountains and Lake Geneva, is bounded on the south by the Mediterranean and on the southwest by Spain. What is my country?"

Kiesel correctly replied: "France."

Kiesel answered in all five questions correctly to win $700 for himself, Alfred Wardell, Jack C. Frasco, Clarence McKlepper, Ray Overholtzer, John S. Costello, James W. Ellis, jr., A. Giltari—and Uncle Sam.

Largest Unit Quits AMA Health Plan

N. Y. County Medical Society Withdraws Assessment Support

New York, March 1 (AP).—The largest member group of the American Medical Association has withdrawn its support of the AMA's plan to fight compulsory health insurance.

The New York County (Manhattan) Medical Society took the action last night.

The group also defeated a resolution, offered by the executive committee, to approve the 12-point program the AMA has offered as a "constructive" answer to the Government's proposed compulsory health insurance plan.

This resolution, however, will be reconsidered at a meeting March 28.

The vote at last night's meeting was 432 to 333 against the AMA's $25 per member assessment to raise three million dollars for a campaign in behalf of voluntary health systems.

At its January 24 meeting, the county society adopted a resolution approving the assessment and generally backing the AMA stand. Approval at that time was by a clear majority after spirited debate, but reconsideration was scheduled for last night. Debate again was heavy.

Yugoslav Demands On Austria Stiffened

London, March 1 (U.P.).—Yugoslavia suddenly stiffened its demands today in negotiations for a treaty to restore Austria's independence.

Yugoslav Deputy Foreign Minister Ales Bebler said the present Austrian-Yugoslav frontier "must" be modified in his country's favor. Previously it had been indicated that Yugoslavia would soften its demands.

Soviet Deserter Says Stalin Has 40-Odd Far East Airfields

Could Not Obtain Air Predominance, General Declares

Tokyo, March 1 (U.P.).—A Russian Air Force pilot who flew a stolen plane to northern Japan and sought refuge with the American Army said today that Russia has forty-odd airfields, 1000 to 1200 planes, four field armies and two naval squadrons in the Far East.

Speaking at a press conference through an Army interpreter, he said the Far Eastern Soviet forces were not being indoctrinated for aggressive action and that he believed if there were a war it would come in Europe rather than Asia. He said he did not believe Russia was prepared to fight a war.

He said he and most Russians he knew believe the Soviet Union now has the atomic bomb. But he said this belief was based only on hints thrown out, notably in a speech by Foreign Minister Molotov and articles on atomic energy development in Russian publications.

The Russian flier asserted he was fed up with communism and wanted to be an American.

[The Associated Press quoted him as saying the defeat of Henry Wallace and election of President Truman had made a profound impression on the Russians. He said he had been led by Russian propaganda to believe Communism was advancing in the world until he heard about the United States election.]

Sergt. Vladimir Barashkov, 23, in the Soviet Air Force more than five years, made an emergency landing in northern Japan last November 10 in a Russian approximation of an American C-47.

Points in his statement included:

Tokyo, March 1 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur told me today that if Russia attacks Japan "we should certainly defend her."

But he added that he did not believe Russia would attack Japan.

In a long interview at his headquarters, the Supreme Allied Commander in the Far East discussed candidly Japan's place in Anglo-American strategy in the Pacific.

In case of another war "we do not want Japan to fight," he said.

"Japan's role is to be the Switzerland of the Pacific," MacArthur explained.

"But supposing she were attacked?" I asked.

"In that case we should certainly defend her," MacArthur said. "But I do not believe Russia will attack Japan.

"Even if the Soviet government had aggressive intentions toward Japan, Russia would be incapable of carrying them out unless she could secure mastery of the air and either had a Far Eastern fleet of her own or possessed the means of neutralizing any action by our fleet.

Five Repudiate Confessions Of Money Plot With Cardinal

Pentecostal Pastor Denies He's Traitor At Trial in Sofia

By Edward M. Korry

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 1 (U.P.).—A small-town Pentacostal pastor stood up in Sofia district court today and denied that he spied against or betrayed Communist Bulgaria.

He was Ladin Ivanov Popov, 36, the twelfth of 15 Protestant pastors to testify and the only who did not plead total guilt and offer repentance for espionage, treason and black market currency dealings.

Testimony of the 15 ended today, and the three-member court, rushing toward a Monday sentencing deadline, called 21 of 80 scheduled witnesses before it adjourned until Wednesday.

All the witnesses testified that the defendants had asked them for information.

Popov admitted he carried out illegal financial transactions and repented for that. But under steady hammering of the prosecutor, he maintained, "I transmitted no information . . . my conscience is clear on that."

The other seven ministers heard today stayed within the previous pattern of the trial, confessing to all charges, repenting and asking mercy. But where those before them had wept and wailed, most of those who testified today were calm.

The session brought forth the first hint of how authorities uncovered the alleged plot against the government.

Defendant Mitko Mateev Dimitrov, 39-year-old Baptist pastor from Sofia, said his conscience began to bother him in 1948 and "thus three months before my arrest I told about my involvement to the authorities." Dimitrov was arrested last summer.

Were Intimidated, Defendants Charge In Budapest Court

Budapest, Hungary, March 1 (AP).—Five defendants today repudiated pretrial confessions that they engaged in illegal money deals in a conspiracy with Josef Cardinal Mindszenty.

They charged that police intimidation had wrung the confessions from them. Another defendant among the 14 accused also withdrew a part of his confession.

The repudiations came shortly before the prosecution completed its case. Wednesday their counsel will have the traditional "last words" of summation. The court then will retire to arrive at a verdict.

The 14 are accused of "political conspiracy" and illegal financial deals with the cardinal, Roman Catholic primate of Hungary. Cardinal Mindszenty and six codefendants were convicted three weeks ago of plotting to overthrow Hungary's Communist-led government.

Zsigmond Deutsch, a broker, started the series of repudiations. Speaking of his "broken nerves," he said he was only partly guilty of the charges he had admitted. He testified he had been kept alone in a cell for a month before he named four persons as his business partners in currency trading.

Deutsch said he had chosen "at random" the names of Mrs. Jozsef Forgacs, Ede Dukesz, Victor Kukesz and Pal Csonka, when he identified them to the police as his partners. All four of those he named followed him to the prisoner's stand and withdrew their confesions, each charging police intimidation.

A former banker, Gyorcy Nagy, also withdrew his confession. He denied the charges emphatically and also spoke of intimidation.

Prosecutor Lajos Hegyvari told the court Nagy had "lost his right to mercy" by his conduct in court.

Universe 'Limits' Questioned

Big Palomar 'Eye' Finds Stars Billion Light-Years Distant

New York, March 1 (AP).—The 200-inch telescope, taking a look twice as far as man ever saw before, has made its first great discovery. There is no outer edge to the universe of stars even that far away, the distance light can travel in one billion years.

Even out there, the telescope found families of stars like our own Milky Way.

The discovery may mean a restudying of Einstein's theory that the universe is limited. Possibly there aren't any limits.

This new, far-distant part of the universe was photographed February 1 by Dr. Edwin Hubble, the astronomer.

The "giant eye" telescope, atop Palomar Mountain near San Diego, Calif., has reached into space twice as far as the 100-inch telescope on Mount Wilson. And the 200-inch telescope isn't perfect yet. There still is a six-month polishing job to be done on the outer 18 inches of the mirror, which is twenty-millionths of an inch too high.

Hubble, in lining up the new telescope for further polishing, turned the instrument northward and upward, to shoot for distance. In this north region the stars of the Milky Way are less numerous. It is good for looking into the complete unknown.

He got some pictures, pin-point size. They were announced at the California Institute of Technology last night as nebulae, a billion light-years distant. Thousands of similar nebulae, much closer to earth, are known. Each one is a world of stars, like the Milky Way.

These star worlds are spaced about a million light-years apart. The star worlds, moreover, are about uniformly spread up to the previous limits of sight, about half a billion light-years.

One stunning human fact the discovery brings home is that there is more than one star for every human being who ever lived. Nearly every star family, or nebula, contains more than a hundred million individual stars.

Perished in Flames . . .

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER—It was a June day in 1947. Mrs. Agnes Ottens played with her daughter, Melody Ann, then 8 months and 7 days old. Yesterday this snapshot from the family album was found in the charred ruins of the Ottens' tourist cabin home near Fort Belvoir, Va., where mother and daughter and Donald Edward Ottens, 1½, were burned to death. A third child was pulled from the flames. (Story on Page B-1)

Thief Gets $824 From Cage Of Bank Teller in Noon Rush

An efficient thief yesterday lifted $824 from an unoccupied teller's cage at the Security Savings & Commercial Bank, 9th and G sts. nw., and walked out of the building so calmly that a midday crowd of patrons continued their transactions unaware of the larceny.

Glassman

Police are investigating the possibility that the man may have been browsing in Pursell's Book Store, 807 G st., while police and curious onlookers swarmed on the street and through nearby buildings.

The man apparently walked up to the No. 1 paying and receiving window in the bank while the teller was out to lunch, reached through the grill and unlocked the gate with a key which was in the teller's side of the lock. Swinging the gate open he scooped up the pile of bills, ranging in size from $20 down, and strode out of the bank.

Bank officials said because of the bulk of several deposits during the morning it had been necessary to unlock the window so that the gate could swing free. The key was apparently left in the lock when Cox went to lunch.

Stanley Glassman, 2480 16th st. nw., who was making out a deposit slip at a desk near the cage, said he saw a man standing at the open window "grab up a batch of something" and walk out of the building.

Glassman said the man was nonchalant, but when he realized he had been seen, he began to hurry. Glassman followed the thief to G st., and saw him head toward 8th st. Returning to the bank, Glassman called John O. Lehmann, the cashier, and the two returned

Clay Hints Blockade Of Soviet Mission

Frankfurt, Germany, March 1 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay implied a junior blockade will be imposed to cut off food, water and telephone service of the Russian repatriation mission here unless it heeds his order to leave the United States zone tonight.

The Russians—eight men headed by Col. Vasily L. Argoonov—sat tight, at least temporarily, at their big yellow house in the heart of Frankfurt's American community.

They said they were awaiting Soviet orders from Berlin.

General Clay issued his order February 16 for closing the mission March 1, saying the number of displaced persons who volunteered to return to Russia in the past year was negligible and that the accredited Soviet military mission could handle the work.

The Soviet government denounced the move last week as a violation or Yalta and Tehran agreements and demanded that the order be rescinded.

General Clay, the United States military governor, said the problem is in the lap of Brig. Gen. Robinson E. Duff, Frankfurt military post commander. He said that if he were General Duff he probably would cut the telephone line to the mission, cut off the water and food supplies and prevent the Russians from "having access to facilities."

He said he regarded even Frankfurt sidewalks as "a facility."

Col. Sterling Wood, Frankfurt military police chief, said he "hoped the Russians will have enough sense to pull out tonight."

5 Europeans Sentenced to Spy Terms

Munich, Germany, March 1 (AP).—Five Europeans, headed by a Pole who said he worked for Poland's secret service, were convicted of espionage and sentenced to prison by a United States military commission today. The terms ranged from 12 to 30 years.

The ringleader, Theodore Szendielorz, 33, drew 30 years for spying on behalf of a "foreign power." No foreign power besides Poland was mentioned in the trial.

The others were Roman Knopp, 36, a German railway worker, 20 years; Rudolf Badura, 31, a Pole, 12 years; Georg Kolodziez, 39, a German, 12 years, and Helmut Schoftock, 22, a German, 12 years.

Szendielorz was charged with having organized the four others as a gang that collected information on military and industrial matters in the United States occupation zone of Germany.

Szendielorz testified he had been a spy in Germany for the Polish government before the war. He said he was arrested by the Gestapo in 1937 and sentenced to a life term. He said he had to cooperate with the Polish secret service upon his release after the war "or I would be dead or in Siberia now."

Another trial, with eight defendants, is scheduled to open Wednesday.

Pact Pictured As War Step

Paris, March 1 (U.P.).—French Communist leader Maurice Thorez tonight charged the Atlantic pact was a "new step, a very dangerous step, on the road to a third World War."

He called it a "flagrant violation of the treaty of alliance between France and Russia."

Thorez made the statements in reply to questions from Leon Pearson, European correspondent of the National Broadcasting Co., shortly after Foreign Minister Robert Schuman told the Council of the Republic the Atlantic pact was the only way to prevent a new war.

The Moscow-trained secretary-general of the French Communist Party also bitterly attacked the Marshall Pan from which he said the Atlantic pact had sprung.

Schuman told the upper house of the French Parliament that France's main objective in the Atlantic pact negotiations was to "obtain the adherence of the United States to a policy of mutual assistance which is the only way to prevent war."

Meanwhile, Premier Henri Queuille's government pushed its investigation of alleged Communist espionage tonight, and the Communists retaliated by attacking Queuille in the Assembly and indicating they might call a general strike.

The anti-Communist Workers Force labor movement said a strike was in the wind and it warned its members not to participate in any "purely political action."

Finally Gets His Medal

Belfast, Northern Ireland, March 1 (AP).—War Hero Daniel Bones finally got his medal. After what officials termed "some delay" Queen Victoria's South African War Medal was pinned on his chest. It was for valor in the Boer War, nearly half a century ago.

Kravchenko Uneasy in U. S.

Paris, March 1 (U.P.).—Victor Kravchenko testified in his libel suit today that he hesitated to publish his anti-Soviet book, "I Chose Freedom," in 1943 for fear the United States might hand him over to Russia.

Kravchenko, a witness in his $3150 action against the Communist weekly Les Lettres Francaises, implied that the United States in 1943 had been too pro-Russian for his liking.

"In 1943, the man in the street in the United States, as well as the American press, had an attitude toward the Soviet Union completely different from the attitude today," he said.

"I was not sure at that time that I would not be turned over to the Soviet authorities. If the attitude toward the Soviet Union in the United States has changed, it is because the people have realized that the Soviet attitude toward them has changed."

He explained, at the invitation of the court, how he wrote the book. His suit is based on a statement published in Les Lettres Francaises that he was "too illiterate" to have written it.

Georges Izard, Kravchenko's attorney, submitted affidavits from experts who examined Kravchenko's handwritten manuscript and persons who assisted in preparing the book for publication.

King Seated At Ceremony

London, March 1 (U.P.).—King George VI, for the first time in British history, granted the accolade of knighthood or other honors to about 300 persons today while sitting in a chair.

The ceremony in the state ballroom of Buckingham Palace marked the King's first major engagement since suffering a circulatory ailment in his legs last November.

The King walked with only a slight limp to the royal dais where he sat on a specially constructed gilt chair, upholstered in red leather, with soft plush padding on the seat and arms.

Fifty-eight new knights knelt before the King's sword, including 31 knights-bachelor.

Lebanon Pact Due Thursday

Ras En Naqura, Palestine, March 1 (U.P.).—Israeli sources said tonight that Israel and Lebanon will sign an armistice agreement Thursday, forging the second link in a chain of Arab-Jewish pacts which is expected to bring permanent peace to Palestine.

Israel and Egypt already have signed an armistice, and negotiations between Israel and Trans-Jordan opened today at Rhodes.

Most of the details of the Israeli-Lebanese agreement were worked out in secret meeting during the past few weeks. Formal talks between representatives of the two nations opened today at this Mediterranean border town.

Henry Vigier, personal representative of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations Palestine mediator, was reliably reported to have submitted a draft armistice agreement for approval of the Israeli and Lebanese governments.

(Tel Aviv dispatches said the Israeli-Trans-Jordan talks at Rhodes were expected to be more complicated and drawn-out than the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations, which lasted 42 days. Some sources predicted that they would be punctuated by military skirmishes. Israel charged yesterday that Arab raiders were invading Israeli territory from the Tulkarm-Nablus-Jenin "triangle" which is occupied by King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan Arab Legion.)

Ex-Chief of Red Cross Is Sentenced as Nazi

Ansbach, Germany, March 1 (AP).—A German denazification court today fined Duke Carl Eduard of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, former German Red Cross president, 15,000 Deutschmarks ($4500). He also was sentenced to six months' special labor as a "minor Nazi offender."

China 'Kidnap' Foiled, Reds Steal Cruiser

Shanghai, March 1 (AP).—China's crisis turned melodramatic today. A purported Red plot to abduct acting President Li Tsung-jen was foiled and the Communists ran off with the government's only cruiser.

Chinese newspapers splashed the story of an asserted Communist plot, unearthed two weeks ago, to kidnap Li and overthrow his government.

Some Chinese authorities here and in Nanking said the story was overdrawn. They said a few arrests had been made.

None of the newspapers gave the source of their information. Here is their story for what it is worth:

Red agents and underground workers of Marshal Li Chi-shen, former friend of Chiang Kai-shek but now his foe, plotted to seize the acting president and other key officials. A campaign of terror was to be loosed and the Reds would cross the Yangtze River in the confusion.

The loss to the Communists of the cruiser Chungking, flagship of the Chinese navy, was admitted by navy sources.

The Chungking, with a thinner-than-usual complement of 450 men, pulled up anchor at Nanking and kept right on going. It sailed down the Yangtze and out to sea.

The cruiser was given to China by Britain last May.

Informed sources in Nanking, meanwhile, said peace talks would begin in Peiping as soon as the Communists work out details delaying the appointment of official delegates.

He succeeds Lieut. Col. Thomas F. Osborne, who is now attending the personnel management school at the Air University, Craig Air Force Base, Ala., according to the announcement made by Col. S. D. Grubbs, commanding officer of Bolling Base. Lieut. Col. James C. O'Conner, 42, of 820 Connecticut ave. nw., has been named executive officer of the Air Base Group

Treatment of Russians In Sweden Protested

Stockholm, Sweden (Wednesday) March 2 (U.P.).—Russia has handed the foreign office a note protesting the treatment of Soviet citizens in Sweden, it was announced early today.

It was believed the Russian action was connected with the arrest February 22 of Eric Suurvaeli, an Estonian, accused of spying here for the Soviet Union.

U. N. Report Hits Dutch On Indonesia

Lake Success, March 1 (NYHT).—In a report to the United Nations Security Council, the U. N. Commission for Indonesia bluntly blamed the Netherlands tonight for the military and political deadlock that continues in Indonesia.

The three-man commission—composed of representatives of the United States, Australia and Belgium—told the Council that despite promises made by the Netherlands government, there still has been no Dutch compliance with the Council resolution of January 28, which asked release of Indonesian political prisoners and restoration of the Indonesian Republican government at Jogjakarta.

As a result, the commission reported, the "failure" of the Netherlands to heed the Council resolution has produced no effective agreement on the establishment of a new independent regime for the rich islands—formerly a Dutch colony.

The commission said it regarded the Netherlands proposal for a Dutch-Indonesian conference at The Hague on March 12 as a "counter-proposal or substitute" for the Council's January 28 resolution, which provides a step-by-step plan for transfer of sovereignty from the Netherlands to the new Indonesian Republic by July of next year.

The Indonesian Republic already has refused its invitation to The Hague conference on the ground that it will not evade the resolution.

Burmese Bolshevik Party Organized

Rangoon, Burma, March 1 (AP).—Existence of a Bolshevik Party in war-torn Burma, pledged to support the Soviet Union and employ its policies, was announced today.

An unsigned manifesto told of the creation of the group.

The pronouncement attacked the government and announced the party will employ "Soviet methods for ending world capitalism." The Bolsheviks intend to link with Chinese Communists and the Viet-Namese of Indo-China alongside Russia, the manifesto said.

Burma quit the British Commonwealth of Nations and became a completely free country last year. It has been beset since then by one uprising after another, of which the civil war with the Karens is the most serious.

Government sources said the Karen fighters finally were withdrawing from Insein, 10 miles north of Rangoon, after a 29-day battle which left the streets littered with dead, and the town a shambles.

Berlin Mayor Coming

By The Associated Press

The mayor of blockaded Berlin, Ernst Reuter, will visit the United States late this month.

The Army announced yesterday that Reuter has accepted an invitation to the United States Conference of Mayors to be held here March 21-23.

90-Mile Gales Batter Europe; 23 Killed, Hundreds Injured

London, March 1 (AP).—Gale winds sometimes reaching 90 miles an hour killed 23 persons in Europe and Britain today and injured hundreds.

The storm burst at the tail end of a mild winter, lashing Britain and wide areas of the continent with snow, sleet and rain. Most aircraft, including the Berlin airlift, were grounded most of the day. Two ships sank and dozens were driven aground.

War-battered buildings in Western Germany crumpling before a 70-mile-an-hour gusts, caused most of the casualties. West German authorities counted 21 persons killed.

Toppling walls crushed 10 persons to death in Cologne.

Five died in Frankfurt, headquarters of the U. S. occupation forces, when the storm flattened buildings in which they were sheltered. Three were killed in Dusseldorf, and one each in Essen, Kassel and Berlin.

A man was killed in Rome when a wall crashed into a street. A woman in Yorkshire, England, was killed by the collapse of the roof of her home.

Britain had the added danger of floods. The Thames River breached its walls at Southend, Gravesend and Erith, and seeped through embankments in London. Plans were made to evacuate residents threatened by floods in resort towns on the English Channel.

Anxious watch was kept at the House of Commons when water began dripping through seams of the coping stones. The water was so high tugs at times could not pass under Westminster Bridge.

The Finnish steamer Tankar drifted helplessly off the Dutch coast. Three ships crashed onto the Danish shore. The Polish steamer Katowice sank in the North Sea, but the crew reached shore safely.

Jobless Pay Drop Noted by Altmeyer

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Since January 8, new applications for unemployment insurance benefits have shown "a marked downward trend," Social Security Commissioner Arthur J. Altmeyer told Congress yesterday.

This is a "very encouraging sign" of national prosperity, Altmeyer declared, since applications for unemployment insurance benefits are "a very sensitive barometer" of employment rates in the United States.

The commissioner explained that the number of benefits being paid still shows an increase since old applications are still being processed as applicants complete their initial waiting period before drawing the compensation.

Altmeyer's hopeful picture of the halt in the recent trend toward increased unemployment was given to the House Ways and Means Committee as the commissioner neared the end of his second day of testimony on President Truman's new "home relief" program.

Cost Estimate of New Plan

Under questioning of Representative Carl T. Curtis (R., Nebr.), Altmeyer gave the percentage increase in payroll taxes which the Administration estimates will be necessary to meet the costs of all the new programs, including national health insurance.

If Congress accepts all Administration proposals and provides that they be paid for out of payroll taxes the costs would jump from the present maximum 5 per cent of payroll to somewhere between 9½ per cent to 11 per cent.

Unless Congress ootherwise provided, this would be divided equally between employer and employe.

Curtis pressed the Social Security Commissioner for figures for the next 25 years. The Nebraska Republican wanted two sets of estimates—one under the assumption that conditions will continue as they now are and one under the assumption that unemployment would be as high as it was in the years 1934 to 1939.

Altmeyer Demurs

Altmeyer demurred, particularly on the latter set, saying he hoped those years had gone "never to return."

Curtis retorted that he did not see how Altmeyer could expect the Congress to commit the taxpayers to a long-range program without having some idea on costs

Earlier Representative Robert W. Kean (R., N.J.) had commented, "It does seem to us you are asking us to give you a blank check for relief purposes."

Altmeyer said that eventually he hoped that President Truman's expanded Social Security would wipe out any need for Federal aid for direct relief, otherwise known as "home relief."

He urged approval, however, of the newly proposed "home relief" legislation as the first phase of the expanded Social Security program.

In response to questions, he said President Truman's plan would permit Federal contributions for relief of families of workers on strike. But, he added, the individual States would decide whether families of strikers would get help.

Cost of the extended Federal aid to some estimated 800,000 needy persons appeared to be the chief concern of committee members. Altmeyer estimated the bill would increase present Social Security costs by 230 million dollars a year.

To Prewar Rates

House GOP Would Cut Excise Taxes

House Republicans voted unanimously yesterday to fight for slashing wartime excise taxes back to the prewar 1941 rates.

At the same time the Senate-House Joint Economic Committee split along party lines on President Truman's economic program, including a four-billion-dollar tax increase, and standby wage and price controls.

The attempt to get rid of the excises levies (sometimes called "nuisance taxes") will be made the major objective of the House Republicans, the party's House Policy Committee decided.

The Policy group's action was announced by GOP Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) who has already introduced a bill to effect the cut.

Martin predicted the Ways and Means Committee would approve the excise tax repealer, adding:

"I understand five Democrats on the Committee favor it."

There are 10 Republicans and 15 Democrats on the committee.

Martin said the GOP reached no decision on veterans' pensions. He doubted that they would make pensions a party program, he said, although the matter will be brought up at a House GOP caucus next Tuesday.

The policy group voted to take no position on the creation of a new Cabinet Department of Public Welfare until after receiving the report on the subject by the Hoover Government Reorganization Commission.

The Government now levies excise taxes on more than 50 commodities or services.

Among those about which most complaints have been received, according to one GOP Congressman, are communications taxes—a levy of 25 per cent on telephone and telegraph bills.

Other wartime excise taxes include 20 per cent on jewelry, furs, luggage and toilet preparations. A group of "miscellaneous taxes" is levied on railroad, airplane and other transportation, club dues, theater admissions, etc. Other wartime excise taxes are imposed on gasoline, automobiles, and auto parts, and electric light bulbs, auto tires, pistols and revolvers.

While the Joint Economic report indorsed most of President Truman's economic program by a vote of 7 to 4, it also:

1. Sidestepped the Administration's request for a four-billion-dollar increase in income taxes.

2. Took no stand on Mr. Truman's suggestion that the Government build steel or other plants if private industry doesn't meet demand.

3. Didn't call for extension of rent controls, but termed their abolition a "great hardship."

The report was "watered down" from the orginal draft—a procedure necessary to get the approval of all Democrats on the committee. The original draft specifically indorsed standby wage-price controls and allocation authority that Mr. Truman had requested.

The revision also merely warned Congress that it should be on guard against continued inflation—much milder words than in the preliminary draft.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman, declared the new version was not a "weak statement." It was revised, he said, because some members felt it "carried certain implications." He would not elaborate.

One Democrat, Senator Sparkman (Ala.) declared he had raised an objection to the first draft because it would commit the members too specifically to the President's entire program. He insisted that the following be inserted in the report:

"This report does not purport to examine in legislative detail the recommendations of the President, and the recommendations here made are necessarily general in character, with full recognition that the appropriate standing committee of the Congress constitute the forum in which legislation must be worked out."

The Republican leader, Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio), declared that the report urges granting Mr. Truman 10 "additional powers."

"Taken together," he said, "they create executive powers which could bring about a completely regimented people."

'Damn' Voiced by Rich Is Quickly Expunged

Representative Rich (R., Pa.) said "damn" on the House floor yesterday and the word promptly was erased from the official record.

Rich got up to talk about inflation, lower prices and President Truman's Council of Economic Advisers—Leon Keyserling in particular.

He yelled that they are "damn poor people" to be advising the Chief Executive.

"Without objection," Speaker Rayburn said, "the word 'damn' will be stricken from the gentleman's remarks."

'Butter Barons' Blasted as Oleo Battle Begins

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The annual battle between butter and oleomargarine got under way before the House Agriculture Committee yesterday. It will continue there for three more days.

This contest between the two spreads for bread has been a yeary congressional sideshow since the dairymen first got occupational and excise taxes levied on butter substitutes in early 1886—just 20 years after another big Civil War.

As in the earlier disagreement, the battle lines are drawn generally between the North, where dairying is an important industry, and the South, where they produce peanut, cottonseed, soybean and other vegetable oils from which margarine is made.

The Federal taxes the margarine proponents want removed are:

1. A levy of ¼ cent a pound on uncolored margarine.

2. A levy of 10 cents a pound on the colored product.

3. An occupational tax of $600 a year on all margarine manufacturers.

4. A similar tax of $480 on all wholesalers of colored margarine and $200 if they distribute only the uncolored product.

5. An occupational tax of $48 on all retailers selling colored margarine, and of $6 on all retailers of uncolored margarine.

Bills to repeal or modify the margarine taxes have been introduced every session since 1886. This year a total of 29 have been offered in the House alone, generally resembling:

1. One by Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.) to repeal the taxes, but to make it illegal to color margarine yellow.

2. One by Representative W. R. Poage (D., Tex.) to repeal all margarine taxes, and providing that restaurants serving margarine display signs telling the public so.

Andresen long has been a leader of the antimargarine, probutter forces; Poage a leader on the other side.

Poage started the rumpus yesterday by an attack on "those greedy gluttons of privilege, the butter barons."

"They want to deny the people who pay the grocery bills the right to decide for themselves what food products they will buy with their own money," he declared.

A Poage supporter, Representative Thomas G. Abernathy (D., Miss.), who boasted he represents "10 hill counties," declared cottonseed is one of the most important products his farmers raise. The margarine laws, he said, have rooked these farmers out of million of dollars, and cost the consumer more millions.

The next witness, who was identified by Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) as "Representative Robert J. Corbett" (R., Pa.), corrected Cooley:

"I'm sorry," he said. "I'm a freshman member. My name is Cecil White of California—a Democrat." He also spoke against the margarine taxes.

One honest witness, Representative Laurie C. Battle (D., Ala.), declared that he was so opposed to the laws that he had introduced a repealer himself. When Cooley asked which of the leading bills his measure resembled, he answered:

"I'm not sure which one I copied."

Outside of promargarine Congressmen, only one witness appeared. He was Harold O. Smith, jr., of the United States Wholesale Grocers Association, who also urged repeal of the taxes.

The session was enlivened by continuous arguments between Poage and Andresen. Poage objected to Andresen cross-examining his witnesses too closely. "He's trying to use up my "time" Poage argued. Each side has two days to complete the testimony.

Sand Hides Wac Rocket After 250-Mile Flight

The "Wac Corporal" rocket which flashed a record 250 miles up into space at the White Sands, N. M., proving grounds last week probably is buried so deep it never will be found, Army ordnance officials said yesterday.

There is no doubt that the rocket returned to earth, officials said, because it was tracked down by automatic electronic equipment installed in its shell before it took off, riding as a "passenger" on a German V-2 rocket until it reached the upper air.

C&O Puts 265 Back on Job, To Call 1038

Cleveland, March 1 (AP)—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway called 265 employes back to work today and said 1038 more would be recalled next Monday.

A spokesman said there were no plans at present for recalling the other 3000 workers laid off by the railway.

Those ordered back today were in the roadway maintenance department of the Chesapeake district. Of 3703 men laid off in the department February 21, there are 418 still out.

The C. and O. said a decline in rail movement was responsible for the layoffs.

The Nickel Plate Road announced the 1087 employes laid off in four of its car shops returned to work today. The shops had closed Febuary 16 due to lack of business.

Railroad Putting Men on 5-Day Week

Albany, N. Y., March 1 (AP)—The Delaware and Hudson Railroad today announced that the work week for more than 1,000 hourly paid employes would be cut from six to five days, effective as of today.

A spokesman said the company had adopted the five-day work week so as to spread employment rather than lay off men.

Field Force of 27 to Start Business Census Next Week

The first census since 1939 on the service, wholesale and retail establishments of Metropolitan Washington will be begun next week by the Washington district field office of the Census Bureau, in connection with the national business census.

Twenty-four field workers and three supervising chiefs will receive preliminary training for their assignments early next week. They will canvas Washington, Alexandria, and the counties of Arlington and Fairfax in Virginia, Calvert, Charles, Montgomery, Prince Georges and St. Marys in Maryland.

Business census data in this area will probably be ready for publication by the end of the year, Samuel H. Freedman, supervisor of the Washington field office stated.

Truscott Says D. C. Needs 2500 Police

In D. C. Schools

Teachers Use Own Money For Supplies

District school teachers are digging into their own pockets for needed school supplies.

This was revealed by school officials in recent hearings on the District budget released yesterday by the House District Appropriations subcommittee.

A. W. Heinmiller, assistant to the superintendent of District schools, reported a recent survey showed teachers spending $2000 to $10,000 in each of the nine elementary school divisions for supplies.

The District needs a minimum police force of 2500 for "complete safety."

At present, it is often necessary for a single policeman to patrol as many as six beats.

This testimony, given before a House Appropriations subcommittee by Assistant Superintendent Floyd A. Truscott, was released yesterday.

The subcommittee denied a request for 30 additional police privates, but made available funds for an increase in personnel of one clerk-stenographer and 10 clerks. This, it was stated, would free seven policemen for patrol duty.

The subcommittee spokesman said it did not feel additional police personnel should be authorized until the approximately 220 vacancies for policemen now existing are filled.

In his testimony Truscott stated the force is more than 200 men short of its authorized strength of 1956, and declared that the low salaries and long hours policemen must work make it difficult to recruit men.

Representative Sidney R. Yates (D., Ill.) asked Truscott if he thought the proposed budget would provide sufficient facilities to afford complete safety to the District.

"It does not," replied Truscott.

Marine Corps Limits March Enlistments

The Marine Corps has suspended March enlistments except for 18-year-olds and a limited number of women.

Recruiting was halted because of increased reenlistments and a cut in strength of the corps. Reenlistments increased from 429 in December to about 600 in January.

The March quota for 18-year-olds has been set at 500. About 3800 of these one-year men are already in the Marines.

Enrollment of volunteers in the Marine Reserve will continue. There is no quota on this group.

Traffic Safety Measures Readied In Dupont Circle

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said yesterday he will be ready with new super-safety measures for the Dupont Circle underpass—set for completion November 1.

Keneipp announced that automatic "Walk" and "Don't Walk" lights will be placed at Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire aves., where they join the circle.

To care for mothers sunning their babies at Dupont Circle, Keneipp disclosed special, five-foot safety islands will be constructed between the sidewalks and the circle itself.

These strips will serve as safety havens for mothers caught in the traffic flow with their carriages as the lights change, he said.

Big Reception At Paying Window

The Washington Post.

SCENE OF CRIME—The cash that was left yesterday after a gunless bandit took $824 from an unmanned cashier's cage, is counted by teller Leslie Cox, 29, of 3416 A st. se. The man turned a key in the latch (arrow), opened the bars and took the money while Cox was at lunch, police said. The robber missed $1831 in the adjoining stack of bills to the street but the man had disappeared in the crowd.

The man was described as 40 years old, 6 feet tall, weighing about 180 pounds. He was well dressed, and wore a tan overcoat and dark brown hat.

Leslie Cox, teller at the window, was out to lunch when the money was taken. Cox, who lives at 3416 A st. se., said the thief passed up a smaller stack of bills, which, because they were of larger denominations, contained $1831.

Miss G. M. Bowling, owner of Pursell's Book Store, near the bank, told a Washington Post reporter that when she came into the store while the crowd was milling about at the scene, she saw a man hanging around the back of the store. She described him as a tall man, wearing a tan camel's hair overcoat and dark brown hat. He browsed around the store, but said nothing when she asked him if he wanted to buy anything.

Miss Bowling said that no one in the store saw him enter, since all the clerks were in the front watching the events on the street. The store has a rear door. When first observed, the man was standing behind a tall card case, she said. The man left the store when a customer entered and began describing the person who had stolen the money from the bank.

CTC to Change Bus Schedules

Capital Transit yesterday announced a change in schedule, effective Sunday, for its L-6 and L-8 bus lines on upper Connecticut ave.

All service on those lines now terminating at Rollingwood will continue on to Rock Creek Forest under the new schedule. In addition, service will be improved between Chevy Chase Circle and Connecticut ave., and Leland st., Rollingwood.

The Kensington-Silver Spring Y-2 bus route will be adjusted to make connections with the L-8 route at Kensington.

Funds Switch At Gallinger Is Criticized

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday released a transcript of its hearings on District budget matters showing sharp criticism by District Commissioner Guy Mason to past budgetary practices at Gallinger Hospital.

Commissioner Mason, the testimony showed, charged Gallinger officials with concealing expansion of services, notably medical supply costs, by transferring unused funds allotted for nursing personnel to cover deficiencies.

The interchange came when hospital Supt. Alvin R. Sweeney asked that his medical supplies' budget request be supplemented from the requested $20,000 to $215,000.

Dr. Sweeney pointed out that in past years the hospital had met deficiencies in medical supply funds "in transfer of funds from personal services, particularly nursing positions."

"But this fiscal year, starting July 1," Dr. Sweeney said, "our recruiting experience has been very favorable . . . We will not have saved sufficient funds in personal services to meet the deficiency we will have."

Representative Yates (D., Ill.), a committee member, asked: "For the past four years did you intend to take the funds that were appropriated for nurses for this purpose?"

"I would like to answer that question," retorted Commissioner Mason. "They expanded the services," and robbed some other services to get it."

"Why," asked Yates, "was there no attempt to make appropriations for it?"

"Because they wanted to conceal these expansions," Mason charged. "They did not come up and get them approved in the beginning. But they expanded them, and then tried to get them approved."

DuPont Firm, 5 Others Fined In Trust Case

New York, March 1 (AP).—E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. and five other defendants were fined a total of $43,000 today on charges of taking part in a world-wide cartel to control certain paint products.

They pleaded nolo contendre, which means they accept the penalty without admitting the charge.

Federal Judge Simon H. Rifkins said the law prevented him from making the penalties more severe.

The firms were accused of freezing out competition in the manufacture and sale of titanium pigments, used in the manufacture of paints and other products. The cartel continued from 1920 to 1940, the Government said.

The defendants, pleaded to two counts of an indictment, and their fines are:

The Dupont concern, $8000; the National Lead Co., $10,000; the Titan Co., Inc., $10,000; Fletcher W. Rockwell, former executive of National Lead and the Titan firm, $5000; Claude F. Garesche, a National Lead vice president, $5000, and Gustave Jessen, vice president of Titan, $5000.

The fine against the Titan Co. was suspended.

AMG Deputy Director Injured in Accident

Berlin, March 1 (U.P.).—William T. Babcock, civilian deputy director of the United States military government office in Berlin, was seriously injured in an automobile accident last night.

Hospital authorities said he was suffering from a concussion of the brain and reported his condition today as "fair."

Budget Figures Compared

The following table compares the current District budget (first column), the budget proposed by the Commissioners for the year beginning July 1 (second column), and the budget approved yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee (third column).

D. C. Budget Cut $4,397,806

a year. Thus if the reduced budget is the one finally adopted by Congress, chances for boosting the Federal payment would be slimmed to the vanishing point.

Other than the Federal payment, the money appropriated by Congress for the District budget comes from local taxes, fees and the like.

The committee's proposed budget total is $955,862 lower than the appropriations for the city for the year ending June 30. If the total stands it would mark the first year since 1933 that the budget of one year has been less than the budget of the preceding year. The budget adopted that year was some 7 million below the preceding one, and since then the total has mounted steadily from year to year.

The budget program was approved as recommended by the House District Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.).

For the Spingran School, to be built near 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., officials had asked that the authorized construction cost be boosted from $2,505,000, based on estimates several years old, to $3,600,000. School officials had called the project an "urgently needed" one to serve an area of the city where there has been an enormous population growth, and where several Negro elementary schools have been built and one junior high started.

Instead of boosting the authorization, the committee ruled that the previously appropriated money "can better be used in the other general fund activities of the District government in the fiscal year 1950. In the event the Commissioners decide to construct the school during 1950 sufficient authority exists for them to enter into the necessary contracts."

Customarily, the aappropriations group records its budget decisions with a table in which reductions are shown by a minus sign, increases by a plus sign. This year's report on the District budget showed no plus signs in the column comparing the committee totals with those asked by the Commissioners. There were nothing but cuts and hardly an agency escaped them.

Like the Commissioners' budget, the committee budget program took no account of the cost of retroactive $330 pay raises which other committees of Congress are now pushing for District employes. The raises, if approved, would start as of last July, and would add some 10 million dollars to the total budget. This cost would be almost exactly covered by a District 2 per cent sale tax on which Joint District revenue-raising subcommittees have agreed in principle.

The deficit—trimmed to 2.5 millions from 8 millions could be taken care of by other tax changes already approved in principle by the revenue subcommittees—the doubling of liquor and beer taxes and liquor license fees. These liquor levies would boost revenue by 3.1 millions a year, and thus would take care of the deficit, thereby avoiding a property tax boost.

Erasing the deficit entirely by budget cuts, the Bates subcommittee decided, would have meant serious curtailing of District operations. The committee threw into its report, a plug for increasing property taxes to take care of whatever deficit there is in the budget—a move which the Commissioners oppose, and which the joint revenue subcommittees have rejected.

The Bates' report called attention to the Commissioners' present power to fix property tax rates to make up a budget deficit and said the Commisisoners could use that power to take care of the proposed budget.

Committee decsions compounding economy with austerity fell heavily on welfare and sewer departments. Biggest single slice was the $1,149,200 taken out of proposed sewer improvement money, leaving $1,355,800 for that work.

In the wefare budget, the committee turned thumbs down on a proposed increase of $289,908 for public assistance grants. It also accepted advice of St. Elizabeths Hospital officials, whose agency gets more than half the welfare budget, to trim $233,655 in their funds. Total welfare budget was fixed at $13,670,000, of which $7,612,622 is for St. Elizabeths, compared with this year's total of $12,880,100, with $6,682,000 going to St. Elizabeths.

Guthrie Calls on Truman

The Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S. J., new president of Georgetown University, made a get-acquainted call on President Truman yesterday. He was accompanied by Father Paul E. McNally, vice president of the university.

Venereal Disease Now Poses a School Problem

District Health Officer George C. Ruhland has found that venereal disease cases are turning up as a problem in the District schools.

Dr. Ruhland, in hearings published yesterday, told the House District Appropriations Subcommittee he feared the VD infections in the schools reflects the conduct of the students.

"There seems to be—that is our impression—much more experimentation, much less restraint," said Dr. Ruhland.

Wisconsin Ave. Widening Due Soon

Long-awaited widening of the Wisconsin ave. "bottleneck" in Bethesda, Md., from East-West hwy. to Glenbrook pky. will begin in about three months.

That disclosure was made yesterday by Montgomery County Engineer Blaton S. Barnett after a conference with the State Roads Commission.

Traffic will not be rerouted while the work is in progress and the job should be completed within 135 days after starting, Barnett said.

Cost to the county will run about $150,000, Barnett estimated, and the remainder will be financed by the State. Plans call for a dual-lane highway about 70 feet wide.

Barnett also announced a pedestrian "tube" will be constructed at the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad underpass on Bradley blvd., Bethesda.

Barnett said the railroad has agreed to build the four-foot wide tube, with a 7-foot clearance, at a cost of about $27,000. He said work should be completed within the next 60 days.

Seven Charges Follow Wild Ride in Big Truck

Police placed seven traffic charges yesterday against Alfred Tillman, 40, of 22 H st. ne., after they reported how he took a wild ride with three others in the front seat of a 10-ton truck near Dupont Circle.

He was charged with two counts of hit-and-run, one charge of having too many persons in the front seat, passing a stop sign, no registration card, no lights on, and failing to exhibit a permit.

concluded their second day of opposition to the new "hole-proof" two thirds cloture rule, still denying a "filibuster" is yet in progress.

Connally, Stennis Talk

Two Southern Senators, Tom Connally (Tex.) and John C. Stennis, picked up where Senator Walter F. George (Ga.) left off late Monday.

George spoke for 44 minutes. Connally led off yesterday with an 84-minute speech. Stennis spoke for 2 hours and 52 minutes. Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), who has threatened to hold progressively longer sessions, adjourned the Senate at 5:14 p. m.

Connally described the Senate as "the last great forum of free debate in the world."

"It is free from the dictatorship of totalitarianism," he said. "It is free from the tyranny of partisanship and group pressures. It ought to remain the one place where public servants can rise and express their views as representatives of their constituents without impairment and without invasion."

Civil Rights Bills

Like George, Connally charged the rules change is being pressed at this time to pass three civil rights bills—anti-poll tax, anti-lynching and fair employment practices legislation.

He said all three are unconstitutional invasions of State powers "but what's a rule of the Senate compared with a comfortable margin at the ballot box . . . We are going to pass this rule regardless of the Constitution, regardless of the precedents of the Senate."

Connally said the legislation was framed "for political purposes and political classes."

He argued the United States "is not now and never has been a pure democracy—it's a democracy of federated States." In cutting back the powers of the States he said the Senate risked "the danger of tyranny and arbitrary power."

As he concluded, someone in the gallery applauded and was cautioned by a guard. Connally shook a finger at his fan in mock rebuke, and said: "You can't do that. There's not enough of you."

'Gag Rule' Predicted

Following a 37-minute speech by Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) on the Taft-Hartley act, Stennis resumed for the Southern opposition.

Stennis said the rules change would "gag" the South and told the Senate: "Gag rule is the weapon of a legislative tyrant."

Like George and Connally, he charged that pressure for the change did not come from the rank and file "but from organized pressure groups who seek to serve what they mistakenly think is their personal gain."

The Mississippi Democrat said the South will be the first "victim" of the change "and I call for volunteers—who will be the second victim? Who wants to be No. 2 on the list?"

He said big and little business, organized labor and even religious groups might some day be the "victims" of the rules change.

To Organized Labor

To organized labor he said: "Those who oppose you will be in a lot better position to get you under this rules change."

He concluded: "God forbid that in a thoughtless moment we surrender one of the fundamental structures of our government, freedom of debate."

Before the Senate recessed, Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) made a four-minute speech announcing his intention to vote for the two-thirds cloture rule.

Said Kem:

"In my opinion, the right of so-called 'unlimited debate' has been abused to the point where the Senate has upon occasion made itself ridiculous not only in the eyes of our own people, but in the eyes of the world."

'As Is' Labor Bill Asked by Truman

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman has sent word to the Democratic majority of the Senate Labor Committee that he hopes the group will report out the Thomas labor relations bill without amendments, it was learned yesterday.

The White House attitude on the controversial measure—which replaces the Taft-Hartley Act with an "improved" Wagner Act—was relayed to Capitol Hill by Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, according to a highly placed Government official.

Tobin made it clear, the authoritative source said, that Mr. Truman is in no mood to add to the Thomas bill amendments designed to make the measure more palatable to Democrats who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947.

Provisions of Measure

As it stands, the Thomas bill would repeal the Taft-Hartley Act, restore the Wagner Act, and add the the following improvements to the latter: a ban on jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts arising out of jurisdictional disputes; and procedure for a voluntary 30-day cooling off period in national emergency strikes.

There's been some talk in recent days that the Democrats of the Senate Labor Committee were considering adding three amendments to the Thomas bill, to provide:

1. Court injunctions for stopping national emergency strikes. The Taft-Hartley Act provides such injunctions. President Truman has himself wanted such a provision, but in deference to organized labor—which hates the very word "injunction"—accepted, instead, the voluntary type of cooling off period upon presidential declaration of an "emergency." Attorney General Tom Clark has stated that the President has the inherent power to obtain a court injunction in case of such a strike.

Anti-Red Affidavits

2. Submission of anti-Communist affidavits by both employers and unions. The Taft-Hartley Act requires such an oath from union officers; the Thomas bill makes no requirement at all. Some AFL leaders have expressed willingness to go along with the anti-Communist affidavit so long as it is made equally applicable to management. The CIO leadership, however, is vigorously opposed to the affidavit on principle.

3. Retention of the Conciliation Service as an independent agency. This agency was separated from the Labor Department by the Taft-Hartley Act, it is restored to the Labor Department by the Thomas bill. Organized labor generally favors the return, management generally prefers the Conciliation Service to be an autonomous agency.

Thomas to See Truman

The Senate Labor Committee, having completed four arduous weeks of hearings on the Thomas bill, will meet in executive session Friday. Senator Elbert Thomas (R., Utah), chairman, has arranged to see the President at the White House this morning and give him a report on the situation.

Senate Labor Committee Republicans also met yesterday and decided against offering a substitute labor bill in committee. Instead, amendments will be offered on the floor of the Senate.

On the other side of the Capitol, the House Labor Committee rejected a subcommittee's proposal for a "two-package approach to labor legislation. The subcommittee, headed by Representative voted to repeal the Taft-Hartley voted to repeal the Tart-Hartley Act and immediately restore the Wagner Act, then hold hearings on amendments to the Wagner Act.

Voted Down by Group

This approach—the one most preferred by organized labor—was voted down in the full committee 16 to 9, with 7 Democrats joining the solid opposition of 9 Republicans. Voting with Kelley for the "two-package" approach were Jacobs (Ind.), Weir (Minn.), Burke (Ohio), Perkins (Ky.), Irving (Mo.), Bailey (W. Va.), Powell (N. Y.) and Steed (Okla.). All but Steed were members of the subcommittee.

The full committee voted instead to take up the Lesinski bill—identical with the Senate's Thomas bill—and authorized Kelley's 13-man subcommittee to proceed with hearings as soon as the full committee reports out the new minimum wage bill. This measure would raise the minimum wage from the present 40 cents an hour to 75 cents, and extend the coverage of the law.

Representative Kelley said he would start the hearings Thursday, if possible, and Monday at the latest. He hopes to confine the hearings to seven or eight full days.

2 Groups Attack State Loyalty Bill

Opposition to Maryland's Subversive Activities Act of 1949 mushroomed yesterday on two fronts in anticipation of hearings on the controversial legislation Thursday morning.

An informal citizens' committee of more than 150 Maryland educators, physicians, lawyers, ministers and civic leaders filed a vigorous protest against the bill with Gov. Wiliam Preston Lane and members of the Maryland General Assembly.

At the same time it was learned that the Maryland State Teachers Association will seek an amendment that would punish those who falsely accuse persons of disloyalty or subversion.

The citizens' protest was forwarded by an initiating committee composed of Dr. Robert K. Burns, sr., Johns Hopkins University biologist, Dr. Alexander J. Walker, Morgan College professor of political science, artist Aaron Sopher, attorney Mitchell Dubow, pianist Louis Shub, the Rev. E. W. White, sculptor Karl Metzler, and Dr. William H. Watts, all of Baltimore.

The protest charged that under the terms of the so-called Ober bill, the following could happen:

1. Catholic organizations could be accused of being dominated or controlled by a foreign power and declared subversive.

2. Because Israel is a foreign nation, Jewish organizations could be declared subversive.

3. All foreign-language fraternal orders could be declared subversive.

Possible Interpretations

The protest said "Under the Ober bill, the mere 'advocating, abetting, advising, or teaching' of any 'alteration' of the laws of Maryland by 'other unlawful means' would bring fines from $5000 to $20,000 and imprisonment from 5 to 20 years."

The group charged that the terms "alteration" and "other unlawful means" were not defined and might be interpreted to include picketing, advocating abolition of segregation, teaching or discussing controversial ideas, or criticizing policies of the political party in power.

Sparking the Maryland Teachers Association move to have the bill amended is a steering committee of MTA. It voted recently to suggest the amendment at the Annapolis public hearing, set for Thursday at 10:30 a. m. before the House Judiciary Committee.

The amendment will be presented by Milson Raver, executive secretary of the teachers' association. If accepted, it would provide "adequate" penalties for persons who make false or unsubstantiated charges of disloyalty against a State employe.

Raver last week attacked the proposed legislation, based on recommendations of the Ober Subversive Commission as leading to "a Gestapo in Maryland."

The MTA move was disclosed by a spokesman for the teachers' association who declined use of his name.

Citing an example of why he believes the amendment "to safeguard rights of the individual" is necessary, the spokesman said he had personal knowledge of this incident:

In Silver Spring, two Federal employes living in adjoining homes became embroiled in "a typical neighborhood squabble." One was so wrathful and vindictive he reported the other Government worker to the loyalty board as being a subversive person.

The employe was investigated and subsequently exonerated, but the mere fact that he had been under investigation has made Federal department heads "leary" of having the man in their departments.

"Maryland teachers," the spokesman said, "are not objecting to the Ober legislation as such, and if our two amendments are adopted we will go along with the legislation."

Carusi Assails Idea He Seeks to Admit More Jewish DPs

By the United Press

Ugo Carusi, head of the displaced persons committee, objected yesterday to a suggestion that his chief aim in seeking changes in the DP law is to permit entry of more Jewish refugees.

He appeared before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee to seek restoration of a $300,000 House cut in funds for his commission. Committee members questioned him about the DP program.

Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) asked him if the chief change he wants would be to increase the quota of Jews eligible to enter.

"That's a very cruel way of putting it," Carusi replied. "I'd prefer not to answer it on that basis."

Carusi objected to provisions in the law requiring 40 per cent of those admitted to come from Baltic countries, and 30 per cent to be farm laborers.

Robertson said he thought emphasis should be placed on admitting refugees who can be assured jobs on farms. Carusi replied that many are now working on farms, some in Robertson's own State, who have had no previous farming experience in Europe.

Navy Lab Worker Protests Dismissal

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LOUIS BROSSEAU, 38, declared his dismissal from a job as a library assistant in the Navy electronics laboratory, San Diego, Calif., was unjust. Brosseau was fired by the Navy captain in charge as "a poor security risk for reasons of personality"

Mrs. Brosseau to Get Hearing on Own Status

San Diego, Calif., March 1 (AP).—The wife of a civilian employe fired as "a poor security risk" will be given a hearing on her own case this week, Navy officials said today.

Mrs. Eva L. Brosseau, 30, a permanent civil service employe, asked the grievance committee hearing. She protested a change of her employment status at the Navy electronics laboratory.

Her husband, Louis Brosseau, 33, was recently fired from a temporary civil service job as assistant librarian at the laboratory.

Capt. Rawson Bennett, laboratory director, said Brosseau was "considered a poor security risk for reasons of personality." His loyalty and ability were not questioned. A grievance committee upheld the dismissal last Friday.

Brosseau, who announced he intends to appeal to the Supreme Court, if necessary, declared the dismissal was "a severe economic penalty and stigma."

Brosseau, a native of France, is a naturalized citizen. His wife is a native of Germany. She obtained derivative citizenship from her father, Dr. Carl Goldenberg of Washington, D. C.

Brosseau said they were admirers of Henry Wallace and voted for him for President.

Managua, Nicaragua, March 1 (AP). Government officials said today that a report published yesterday in a Costa Rican newspaper that a military revolt had broken out in northwestern Nicaragua was completely without foundation. They said there was quiet in the entire country.

Thief Gets 15 Days

Marcellus G. Richardson, 38, of 1813 10th st. nw., was sentenced yesterday to serve 15 days in jail for stealing a can of 69-cent salmon Monday from a Giant Food Store. According to detectives in Municipal Court, Richardson picked two cans of the fish from the shelves, put one can in his pocket and paid for the other.

When Barbers Talk About Home Shaving—THAT'S NEWS

WASHINGTON, March 2

Remember when the barber treated you to the old fish-eye when you said you shaved at home? Not any more—our demon interviewer recently asked barbers what they recommended for shave-at-homes. 86% said "use a blade that's Hollow Ground like my razor." That means PAL Hollow Ground, the blade that's ground like a barber's razor, for keener, quicker "feather-touch" shaves. PAL still gives you 4 blades for 10¢, 10 for 25¢, 21 for 49¢ and 44 for 98¢—for Single and Double Edge razors. Try PAL—today. Your dealer stocks them.

Police See Racket In Three Slayings

Byron Center, Mich., March 1 (AP).—Police claimed complete confessions today from a 200-pound divorcee and her balding partner to three slayings in a deadly "lonely hearts" racket.

Prosecutor Roger C. McMahon said the pair admitted in a formal statement the killing of a young widow and her little daughter in this western Michigan village and the strangling of a widow in New York.

The pair, 29-year-old Martha Beck and Raymond Martinez Fernandez, 34, were arrested Monday night as they came home from a theater.

Within a few hours police dug the bodies of Mrs. Delphine Downing, 28, and brown-haired Rainelle Downing, 20 months old, from cement-filled graves in the basement of their cottage.

The widow had been shot through the head and her daughter drowned in muddy water scooped from her mother's grave.

Under police questioning, both Mrs. Beck and Fernandez then admitted beating and strangling a woman identified as Mrs. Janet Fay and burying her body in a basement on Long Island, N. Y., according to McMahon.

The prosecutor said the pair told him of traveling as brother and sister through the eastern part of the Nation finding victims through letters addressed to lonely hearts clubs. When successful in finding a victim, they bilked her of all the money they could and then disappeared.

The prosecutor said the pair described how Fernandez married women in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Vermont and Massachusetts, then meeting the woman identified as Janet Fay in Albany.

"We got $3000 from her," McMahon quoted Mrs. Beck as saying.

On January 4, because she was "jealous," the husky Mrs. Beck slugged Mrs Fay over the head with a pipe, McMahon was told. Fernandez strangled her, he continued, and they stuffed her body in a steamer trunk.

New York police tonight said they found a body in a house in South Ozone Park, Queens, where Mrs. Fay's body was believed to have been buried. There was no immediate identification of the body.

The pair came here January 23 to meet the widowed Mrs. Downing. After living for several weeks in Mrs. Downings house, Fernandez induced her to sell the property.

Became Suspicious

Last Saturday the widow began showing signs of suspicion, however, and the pair determined to silence here, their statement continued. First they drugged her with sleeping pills, then Fernandez shot her. Mrs. Downing was buried in a shallow grave in the basement.

To appease the little girl, they bought her a dog. But she cried.

Mrs. Beck related how she "undressed the girl and, holding her by the feet, I put her head in one of the tubs of water we had bailed out of the mother's grave."

The two poured concrete around the little girl's body, McMahon said, and went to a movie. When they returned about midnight Monday police were waiting for them. They had been called in by suspicious neighbors.

After finding $4000 in cash on Fernandez, they searched the house and found the bodies.

Mistinguette Ill

Paris, March 1 (AP).—Mistinguette, 72, famed French dancer, is ill of uremic poisoning at her Riviera home.

Teacher Says Fernandez Married Her in Fairfax

A 41-year-old schoolteacher in Pennhurst, Pa., told the United Press last night that she was married to Raymond Fernandez at the Fairfax County (Va.) Courthouse on February 28 of last year.

After hearing of Fernandez's arrest as a "lonely hearts" triple slayer, Miss Esther Henne revealed her marriage which lasted a month.

They lived in a New York City apartment with Mrs. Martha Beck, whom she said Fernandez described as "his brother-in-law's sister-in-law."

"I began to hear stories in our apartment house about how he went to Spain with a woman and she died," Miss Henne said.

Britain, Ulster Launch Half of World Tonnage

London, March 1 (U.P.).—Lloyd's Insurance Underwriters reported tonight that the combined shipbuilding output of Britain and Northern Ireland was slightly more than half the total world tonnage in 1948.

Britain and Ulster launched 1,176,000 tons out of a world total of 2,309,743 tons.

The United States ranked fifth with 126,418 tons, following Sweden, Holland and France.

Some Montgomery Arrests Illegal, Keith Lawyer Says

Montgomery County residents are sometimes arrested illegally, it was charged yesterday in Silver Spring Police Court.

Under the law, it was contended, no one can legally apply for a warrant unless he has direct knowledge of the event

The point was raised by two attorneys, Joseph C. Cissel and Mrs. Emma Waldrop, defending Billy W. Keith, 24-year-old Silver Spring stock clerk of assaulting his 18-month-old son, Billy, jr. The family lives in Viers Mill Village, Md.

The lawyers said Keith was arrested on a warrant sworn out by a detective and a juvenile official—neither of whom, they contended, had any personal knowledge of the alleged offense.

A plea by the lawyers to quash the charges on the ground the warrrant was taken under advisement by Trial Magistrate William B. Wheeler.

Voting Machines Measure Approved

In Prince Georges

$4,986,738 Requested For Schools

By Phil Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 1.—Prince Georges County is among 11 Maryland counties which are required to purchase voting machines in a bill favorably reported today by the Maryland Senate Elections Committee.

Montgomery, Howard and Anne Arundel counties and Baltimore City already have voting machines.

Nine counties were exempted from the mandatory provisions of the bill, with the county commissioners in each case left to decide whether to purchase the machines.

State Help Provided

The bill provides for State assistance in purchase of the machines to replace paper ballots.

Prince Georges has been investigating the possibility of using voting machines for its increasingly populous balloting places, but has been deterred by the cost.

The county already has set up a card index form of registration lists such as is used in connection with voting machines.

Counties exempted are Washington, Allegany, Garrett, Wicomico, Calvert, Dorchester, Queen Annes, Charles and St. Mary's.

Chairman P. G. Stromberg (D., Howard) said the use of the machines is "one thousand per cent desirable." Savings in clerk hire and need for fewer voting places were cited as offsets to the cost of machines.

Prince Georges Bills

The House today passed five bills affecting Prince Georges County.

They include measures to grant the town of Berwyn Heights power to construct and maintain streets, sidewalks and alleys; to provide for a referendum on increasing the salaries of the mayor and town council members in Mount Rainier; to empower the mayor and council of Laurel to regulate signs on streets, sidewalks and other public property; to extend the limits of Cottage City; and to require approval of the county engineer for width of highways on plats to be recorded.

A bill introduced by the county delegations would permit issuance of beer, wine and liquor licenses to county race tracks for a fee of $5 a day.

Opposition was encountered to a proposed bill which would incorporate the area between Bladensburg and Good Luck Road, including Rogers Heights, Riverdale Heights and Riverdale Hills into a new corporation to be known as Maryland City with a population of approximately 5000.

Petitions bearing signatures of 500 residents in Riverdale Heights and Riverdale Hills were presented to Perry O. Wilkinson (D., Prince Georges), chairman of the county delegation, opposing the bill. The bill has not been introduced yet.

Erection of a $2,500,000 Patuxent River bridge between Charles and Calvert Counties moved a step forward today when it was reported out of the Ways and Means Committee of the House with a favorable report.

A hearing on a proposal to incorporate Morningside will be held by the Prince Georges delegation at 9 p. m. Wednesday. The measure would be subject to a referendum, but many citizens have asked for a hearing, Wilkinson said.

Annapolis, Md., March 1 (AP).—The Senate today rejected a claim that Maryland's unique Declaration of Intentions Act is a safeguard against "floating" voters and Communists.

After a half-hour debate, the Senate adopted 23-5 a favorable committee report on a bill to repeal the law. In past sessions, the perennial repealer has passed the Senate only to die in the House.

The law requires a new resident to file formal notice one year before he becomes eligible to register as a voter.

This means "the loss of the right to vote for approximately two years, since such persons first learn of the Maryland law when they go to register," the repeal bill states.

Senator Hubert P. Barton (D., Baltimore 2d) said the Declaration of Intentions Law prevents "Communists from dragging in floating populations" to vote at Maryland elections.

Majority Leader L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges) touched off debate when the elections committee brought the bill out with a favorable report.

He said the law helps prevent unauthorized voting blocs from "tourist camps" and people who "come down from Pennsylvania and register and vote."

Told that Maryland is the only State with such a law, Sothoron said "Maryland has been first in religious libery and first in economic liberty. I see no reason why we should not be first in this."

Senator Louis Goldstein (D., Calvert) said the law was passed in the early 1900 "when sliding railroad cars came over the State line with voters," but termed its provisions unnecessary today.

The Senate election committee earlier approved a bill to replace paper ballots with voting machines throughout the State, but with leeway for nine counties to make their own decision.

As a matter rested, Senators from Washington, Allegany, Garrett, Wicomico, Calvert, Dorchester, Queen Annes, Charles and St. Marys were given time to exempt their counties.

Among measures passed by the Senate was one to authorize a Hagerstown referendum on a new city charter.

The House stamped final approval on a bill to allow pensioners to draw unemployment compensation.

Delegates also promptly adopted a public health and welfare report which would give optometrists a professional standing, allow them to prescribe contact lenses and teach eye exercises. The bill produced lively exchanges at a morning committee hearing.

Delegate John F. McNulty (D., Anne Arundel) suggested creating a three-member harness racing commission to supervise the sport, rather than the State Racing Commission. His bill would retain a 100-day limit on trotting and pacing events, but extend the time for a single meeting from 20 to 35 days.

Delegate Mary L. Nock (D., Wicomico) put in another bill to lift the sales tax off certain items. She would exempt church suppers. Related measures have been put on a ways and means committee rack.

Educators Oppose Advisory Commission

Annapolis, Md., March 1 (AP).—A big delegation of educators and college executives urged a Senate committee today to reject a bill to create a State Advisory Commission on Education.

In the group was Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, jr., Maryland's Superintendent of Schools.

But main spokesman in the verbal onslaught on Senate Bill 14 (which has Legislative Council approval) was Judge William P. Cole, jr.

Judge Cole, chairman of the University of Maryland board of regents, told the Senate Education Committee frankly the institution "is not anxious to contend with snoopers employed by a so-called advisory board."

The proposed commission would be charged with studying all phases of public and State-aided education in Maryland and to make recommendations.

Lee Assails Legal Barriers To Montgomery Plan Agency

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Present laws that prohibit Montgomery County from setting up its own planning agency are "discriminatory," Montgomery County Council President Frederic P. Lee declared yesterday.

The charge was the latest development in a running disagreement between the council and the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

At the regular council meeting in Rockville yesterday, Lee cited a State law that exempts Montgomery County from statutes allowing Maryland counties to set up their own planning agencies. Under the law, the MNCPPC is charged with planning responsibilities in nearby Maryland.

"There is no reason why Montgomery County should not enjoy the same status as other counties," Lee declared.

Lee made his remarks in reporting to the county council statements made by him before the Maryland General Assembly last week, when he urged enactment of proposed legislation that would transfer certain administrative and regulatory powers of the MNCPPC to the county council.

The proposed legislation is being fought vigorously by the park commission.

Extending his remarks of last week, Lee told council members in his report that some "doubt" had arisen in his mind whether the MNCPPC planned prompt fulfilment of its recent pledge to accept "full responsibility" for zoning and building code enforcement in the county.

The suspicion arose, he said, when J. Bond Smith, general counsel for the MNCPPC, questioned him recently as to when the county government planned to make available additional funds to the MNCPPC to make the enforcement possible.

"The county is already making more money available through increasing the county's assessable base about 55 million dollars," he said. Under the increase, he pointed out, about $15,000 would be made available by the special 3-cent levy that supports the MNCPPC.

"This," Lee continued, "would be enough to hire a lawyer at $8000 and another zoning inspector if the present large number of inspectors is considered inadequate.

"I know of nothing that has contributed more to criticism of public officials in Montgomery County in the past than the almost complete failure to enforce the building code and zoning laws."

Lee criticized Smith for telling legislators at the hearing that zoning violations in the county are "negligible."

Such violations, Lee said, are "widespread."

Pointing out that Smith had often admitted that many zoning violations exist, Councilman J. Douglas Bradshaw commented: "It looks like Mr. Smith was something less than candid at the public hearing before the Legislature."

Joining in, Councilman Lewis Meriam also cited "flagrant and open" zoning violations.

Baltimore Set For War on Crime Comics

Baltimore, March 1 (AP).—Mayor D'Alesandro is declaring war on crime comic books.

He sent to City Council today a bill that would prohibit the sale or distribution of "comic books," magazines or other publications that feature accounts of crime by drawings or photographs.

The bill's preamble says in part, "It appears that minors are of susceptible and impressionable character, and often stimulated by collections of pictures and stories of criminal acts and do in fact often commit such crimes partly because incited to do so by such publications."

The measure would not apply to accounts of crime that are part of the general dissemination of news or of art connected with news accounts.

Willkie Awards for Negro Journalism Made To Norfolk Paper, Atlanta, Cleveland Writers

Cambridge, Mass., March 1 (AP).—The Norfolk (Va.) Journal and Guide, and newsmen of the Atlanta Daily World and the Cleveland Call-Post were named today by Harvard's Nieman Foundation for the 1948 Wendell L. Willkie awards for Negro journalism.

Lautier

The Journal and Guide was cited for "its over-all performace," and in particular for "the consistently high caliber of its editoral page," directed by P. Bernard Young, jr.

Named for $250 cash awards were Louis R. Lautier, Washington correspondent of the Atlanta Daily World, and Simeon Booker, jr., of the Cleveland Call-Post.

Lautier was credited with "distinguished correspondence," and Booker commended for a feature series "exposing discriminatory conditions in Cleveland's public schools."

The awards were given by Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer of Washington, D. C., and judges were Alan Barth, editorial writer of The Washington Post; Grady E. Clay, jr., reporter for the Louisville Courier-Journal; David B. Dreiman, science writer for the Minneapolis Star; E. L. Holland, jr., editorial writer for the Birmingham News, and Nieman Curator Louis M. Lyons.

Wylie Barrow to Head Unit in Cancer Drive

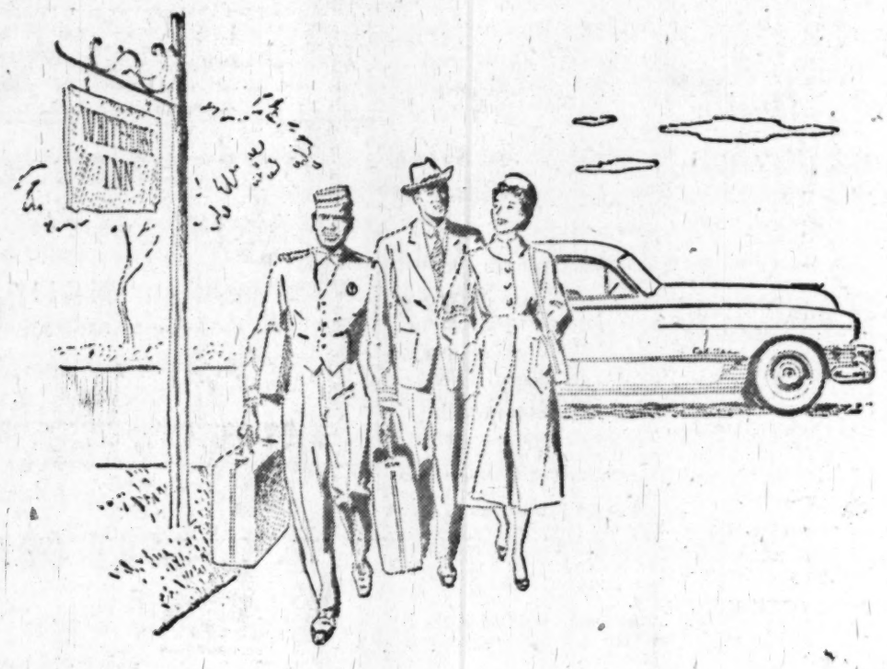
Wylie Barrow, 515 Cumberland ave., Somerset, Md., has been named chairman of the business division for the American Cancer Society's 1949 campaign here, it was announced yesterday.

The American Cancer Society's 1949 goal has been set at $14,500,000, but the District goal has not yet be announced.

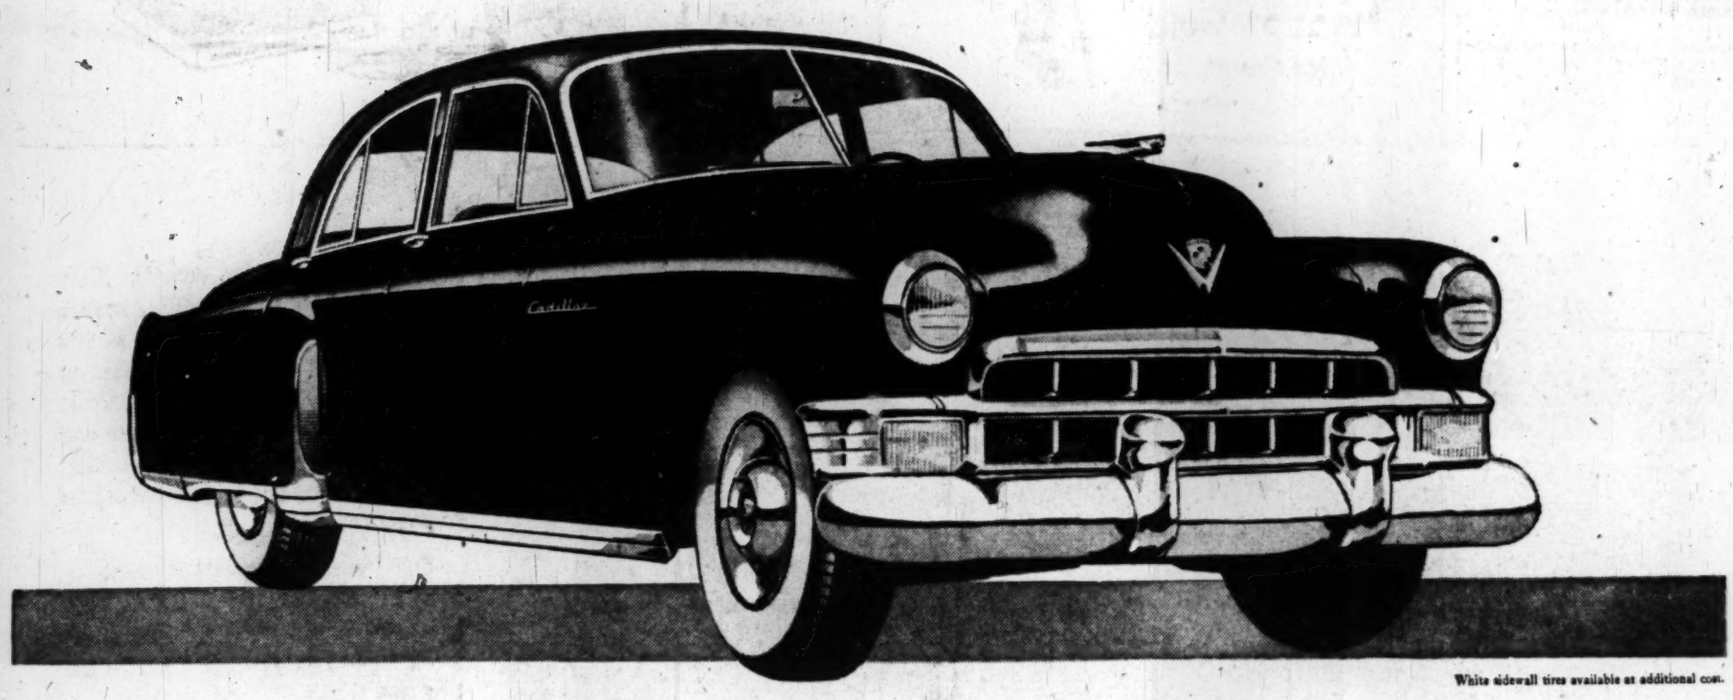
Three Authors Honored

Chicago, March 1 (AP).—Three authors have been awarded bronze medals by the American Library Association for producing the "most distinguished" children's books of 1948.

Marguerite Henry of Wayne, Ill., won the Newberry Medal for her story "King of the Winds." Berta and Elmer Hader of Nyack, N. Y., won the Caldecutt Medal for their picture book, "Big Snow."



It Adds a Hundred Miles to the Day!



White sidewall tires available at additional cost.

Owners of the 1949 Cadillac are going to get a pleasant surprise when they take it out for that first cross-country run. Without any extra effort whatsoever, they are going to wind up that first day's touring about a hundred miles farther from home than they expected to be! For here, beyond any doubt, is the greatest "mile-eater" that ever rolled over a highway. We are not talking about excessive speed—because, regardless of the power they have at their command, sensible people observe the laws of the road and the rules of safety. But the 1949 Cadillac is so cat-quick and eager—so smooth and easy and effortless—that it covers an amazing amount of distance inside the safe and legal limits. You take the hills as fast as the level stretches—you make the first hundred yards away from a stop light as fast as you make the second hundred—and the car's matchless agility enables you to avoid many of the pockets in slow-moving traffic. The secret, of course, is found in the great new Cadillac V-type engine—plus the marvelous new engineering in the Cadillac chassis. Actually, you almost seem to move by automatic propulsion. There is no performance like it—anywhere in the world.

Bid Shows Construction Cost Drop

A drop of at least 5 per cent on school construction costs in the past three months was reported yesterday by District Director of Construction Archie G. Hutson after bids were opened for the new Stanton Elementary School, Alabama ave. and Naylor rd. se.

Hutson said the low bid submitted by John Tester & Son, Inc., 1620 2d st. sw. of $619,207, indicated a square foot cost of $10.35. He compared this with the $11.15 square foot cost bid for the Walker-Jones Elementary School on January 4.

The construction official said the drop on the contractors' bids between the two schools was about 7 per cent, but the Walker-Jones project involves more demolition work and therefore the net change is about 5 per cent.

The bids were:

Joseph F. Hughes & Co., Baltimore, Md., $721,085; F. H. Talk on Antitrust Laws

J. Ridley Mitchell, special assistant to the Attorney General, will speak on "Antitrust Laws" at a meeting of the Optimist Club at 12:30 p. m. today at the Continental Hotel.

A plan to ease Fairfax County's schoolroom shortage by building several small inexpensive schools was unfolded yesterday by the county school board in a joint meeting with the county supervisors.

The plan calls for four-room buildings built of cinder block without basements. Superintendent W. T. Woodson said a contractor had told him the schools could probably be built for $40,000-$50,000, a fraction of the cost of a completely equipped school.

As soon as money is available, Woodson said, additions would be built with basements to house the larger heating plants needed and the cinder blocks would be bricked over.

Woodson pointed out that these would be permanent buildings. The only eventual loss to the county, he said, would be the small heating plants needed immediately to heat the four-room buildings.

He described the plan as an "emergency gesture toward meeting the need in the most pressing spots."

The school board called the supervisors in for an informal discussion because it needed some indication on what help it could get from the county before submitting its annual budget to the supervisors later this week.

School Board Chairman Fred Robinson said the construction of these schools could probably be financed largely from real estate taxes received in excess of present estimates. But he said the school board would need in addition either a $50,000 appropriation from the county or a 10-cent increase in the county tax rate.

The supervisors agreed to take the matter up at their meeting today.

Crowning Scheduled

A king and queen will be crowned at the Wilson Teachers College prom Friday between 10 p. m. and 1 a. m. in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

School Site Care Urged

Coordination between the Arlington School Board and the Arlington county government in acquiring school anad recreation sites was urged last night by the Arlington Civic Federation, meeting at Lyon Park Community House.

The federation postponed action on a companion motion by Chairman Tam Deering of the group's recreation committee asking that the county submit to a referendum bond issues to acquire at least one acre of recreation space for each 100 population.

In his recommendation, Deering said that Arlington now has only 374 acres for recreation

The federation asked the Arlington School Board to construct new school buildings in such manner that they may be used by the community

Armstrong Leads 'Zulu' Band In Mardi Gras Pleasure Prowl

New Orleans, March 1 (U.P.) Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong raised his shiny trumpet in one hand today and a glass of champagne in the other and took the warriors of the Zulu Social, Aid and Pleasure Club of Down Poydras Street in unsteady search of Mardi Gras pleasure.

Satchmo, possibly the greatest jazz trumpet player alive, presided over the Negro Mardi Gras celebration "back of town." Along Canal Street, up St. Charles Street and through the French Quarter, the white people were making merry with bottle, costume and mask.

All told, 500,000 to 600,000 persons, native and tourist, were preparing for Lent.

Rex, the white king of misrule, and his queen paraded down St. Charles st. and up Canal.

Rex was Lester F. Alexander, a middle-aged shipbuilder. His queen was Dolly Ann Souchon, a 19-year-old debutante of an old French family.

They stopped in front of City Hall to drink a toast with Mayor Delesseps S. Morrison and Gen. George C. Marshall, former Secretary of State.

Comus, the oldest of the Mardi Gras organizations, held its parade tonight. Comus and Rex entertained thousands of members of their carnival organizations and guests at balls tonight.

The Zulus had five jungle floats, from which they distributed 2000 coconuts as "favors." They distributed the coconuts by throwing them as high into the air as they could. Occasional oaths indicated that direct hits had been scored on some heads.

Women Back Prince Georges School Plans

Full indorsement of the Prince Georges County School Board's construction program was given yesterday by the county League of Women Voters.

The group, represented by a delegation to the monthly school board meeting in Upper Marlboro, handed the board a year-long study of school needs it has just completed. It contained indorsement of the building program.

The study also urges quadrupling of the State incentive fund and other school-improvement measures.

In other business, the board designated March 14, 15 and 16 as registration days for all pupils who enter first grade next September. Registration will be held at all elementary schools.

School Supt. G. Gardner Shugart said children to be entered in the first grade must be 6 years old on or before January 1, 1950. They must bring birth certificates with them to register.

Ethridge Appointment Among 87 Confirmed

The Senate yesterday approved of 87 nominations made by President Truman.

Mark F. Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal and Times, was approved as United States member of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine.

Senator Chapman (D., Ky.) had been expected to oppose the Ethridge nomination because of past political differences. But there was no objection when Ethridge's name was brought up.

Paralyzed Blood Donor Voted $7026 by House

The House lent a sympathetic ear yesterday to the troubles of A. J. Crozat, jr., of New Orleans, who was disabled by two donations of blood to the Red Cross.

The first time he gave blood, he became dizzy and ill. The second time, his face, arms and legs became paralyzed. He is still disabled.

The House voted him $7026. It sent the bill to the Senate for approval.

Axis Sally Had U. S. Passport When 'Stranded' in Germany

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Miss Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars had an American passport, although it had expired, all during the time she claimed she was stranded in Germany with no identification papers, cross-examination brought out yesterday at her treason trial.

In addition, she might have appealed to United States' authorities in Berlin for succor when, as she testified, she was first threatened by the Nazis in July, 1941, but she did not do so because she "did not have money for passage" to the United States.

These facts, plus a statement from Miss Gillars that she was only "clowning" when she implied in a broadcast to United States troops that their wives might be "running around with 4-Fs back home," were the highlights of testimony brought forth yesterday in District Court under the pounding cross-examination of Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr.

Efforts to Flee Paris

Kelley, speaking softly and deliberately, his calm demeanor in sharp contrast to the often nervous, sometimes tearful attitude of Miss Gillars, scored again with questioning about the latter's efforts to flee Paris as the Yanks advanced.

"Were you afraid of your countrymen?" Kelley asked. "Why, if you had been threatened and coerced by the Gestapo, did you not wait in Paris for the Americans?"

"Because I did not want to be separated from Professor Koischwitz by any troops!" the defendant retorted, flinging her gray head backward.

(Prof. Max Otto Koischwitz, former Hunter College professor who returned to Germany to become active in Nazi affairs, was the sweetheart of Miss Gillars, she had testified.)

"Did Dr. Koischwitz mean more than all the world to you?"

"I believe men generally mean more to women than anything in the world," Miss Gillars declared. "I would have died for him—yes!"

"You left Paris on August 15, 1944?"

"Yes."

"The Americans entered one or two days later?"

"Yes," Miss Gillars said.

Other points made by Kelley during a wearing three-hour cross-examination included an admission by Miss Gillars that she had misrepresented her age on an application for a passport in 1929, and that she knew Koischwitz had been indicted in Washington as a traitor in 1943.

Passport Produced

Kelley led into the matter of the expired passport by asking the defendant what she did with a passport issued to her in Algiers in 1934.

"I don't remember. I believe I wasn't allowed to keep it . . ." she replied.

Kelley then produced the passport, and after Miss Gillars identified it, asked her: "How was it this passport was found in the possession of a Nazi block leader in 1946?"

The defendant then sought to explain that the papers had probably been turned over by a Russian who occupied her apartment after her arrest by the United States Army in 1946. This testimony was cut off as "hearsay," and Miss Gillars admitted the passport had been among her effects all during 1941.

After the defendant was questioned about charges of "sabotage" she said were made against her by her Nazi radio superiors around July, 1941, when she inadvertently left a couple of lines out of a manuscript broadcast, Kelley asked why she did not get in touch with United States authorities and arrange to go home.

"No Money for Passage"

I had no money for passage," Miss Gillars said. A little later, questioned along the same lines, she replied: "Well, I'm not a coward. I don't run away from danger. I didn't run away from Paris. I was forced to go with a military convoy."

"When did you think of that?" Kelley asked ironically. "During lunch? You said before you left because of Koischwitz."

"Of course—but I'm not a coward," was the reply.

Confronting her with phrases contained in broadcasts identified as those of Miss Gillars, Kelley demanded: "When you said 'I think it a shame that this good American blood is being shed for Roosevelt,' Churchill and the Jews, did you consider it propaganda?"

"Not at the time I spoke it?"

"And," Kelley continued, "when you said, 'she'll never surrender till you surrender' did you think that would entertain your countrymen in the foxholes?"

Says She Was 'Clowning'

" I knew that they were not taking that seriously . . ." the defendant answered.

Kelley pursued: "And when you said 'I wonder if she's not running around with 4-Fs' did you think that entertained them?"

"I had proof that it did," Miss Gillars asserted.

"Why," demanded Kelley, "did you previously deny that you told American soldiers their wives were running with 4-Fs?"

"I was telling them—I was just clowning," was the reply.

Earlier Miss Gillars testified she received harsh treatment, poor food and suffered the taunts of soldiers that she would be hanged, during her incarceration by the Army before being returned to this country last year.

The defendant faces further cross-examination when the trial is resumed at 10 a. m. today.

Gen. MacArthur Sought As Tokyo Rose Witness

San Francisco, March 1 (U.P.).—Wayne M. Collins, defense counsel for Iva Toguri D'Aquino, better known as "Tokyo Rose," today asked the Federal Court to subpena Gen. Douglas MacArthur to testify in her trial for treason.

MacArthur's name was included along with his chief of intelligence, Maj. Gen. Charles Willoughby, among 43 military officers and Japanese witnesses the defense demands must testify for American-born Mrs. D'Aquino, who entertained American troops in the Pacific with war-time broadcasts from Tokyo.

Fined in Assault Case

Zane J. Soper, 38, was fined $25 yesterday for making a pass at a 23-year-old housewife while he was delivering groceries in her kitchen. The assault charge was filed in Municipal Court.

I HATE DANDRUFF!

Get Welcome Relief From Stomach Gas, Sour Food Taste

Do you feel bloated and miserable after every meal? If so, here is how you may rid yourself of this nervous distress. Thousands have found it the way to be well, cheerful and happy again.

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment, sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Gap In Authority

Should the armed forces have legal power to try their personnel for criminal acts committed during previous enlistments? We believe they must, in the interests of both justice and discipline. But the effect of the Supreme Court decision in the Hirschberg case is to leave them without such power. Justice Black, speaking for a unanimous court, reversed the conviction of Chief Signalman Harold Hirschberg for allegedly striking two fellow American internees in a Japanese prison camp. The ground for the reversal was the fact that Hirschberg had been honorably discharged and served 11 months of a new enlistment before he was faced with the charges that led to court-martial. The honorable discharge and gap in service, said Justice Black, voided the Navy's authority to try Hirschberg for occurrences during his prior enlistment.

The decision is confined to legal technicalities and does not bear upon the acts of which Hirschberg was accused. The Supreme Court reviewed court-martial history and found that since the Civil War the Army had not construed its authority as giving it the right to try a man for what he did before an honorable discharge. When Congress specifically authorized such proceedings in cases of frauds against the Government it implied strongly, according to the court, that the services did not have such power in other instances.

Regardless of the legal background, the result of the decision is to render the honorable discharge a complete pardon for anything the recipient may have done that did not come to light prior to his release. We cannot believe that it is the desire of Congress to reduce the armed services to helplessness in such cases. Some ridiculous situations could arise that would flout the whole purpose of military justice. For example, what about a man who, just before the expiration of his enlistment, committed a crime that was not immediately discovered? Conceivably he could reenlist and would be untouchable even though the act had been committed only a few days before. Clearly this inconsistency demands the attention of Congress. Military law ought to be amplified to bridge the gap between enlistments and cover persons who now receive all the benefits of continuous service without being answerable for their previous conduct.

Ex-Reds As Pets

Very rapidly the professional apostates of communism are climbing into the top reaches of the American aristocracy. It has been noticed that when any of them appears before a committee of Congress, he (or she) is treated with extra consideration, sometimes with awe. Outside the committee rooms the crusading turncoat finds himself besieged with social invitations. A hostess simply has to whisper that he is coming to dinner, and she can command attendance on the part of persons whom she has hitherto invited in vain. The guest of honor will probably be late, but, after all, think of his previous engagements. He may have had to "meet the press" (on the radio) or discuss with Hollywood or magazine magnates a movie or an article aimed at shedding new light on the dangers besetting our Republic. Never was there such a commotion on his bandwagon. Hollywood, of course, is anxious to be a model of conformity, having been shown up as riddled with communism, and the magazines know a good story when they see it. The renegade stands serene and content amid the hubbub, the center of attraction, with a flaming sword in his hand, though of a different make from the one wielded in believer days.

Whether society profits from the former Red turned violently anti-Red is problematical. By common consent the best protection against the infiltration of international communism is the stability of the American economy; the inevitability of what the Muscovites call capitalistic collapse is the main item in the credo of the masters of the Kremlin. But psychology is the cousin of economics. A depression is not the result of objective forces operating in a vacuum; it arises out of men's actions, or, sometimes, out of their lack of actions, and the stability of American opinion is thus linked with the stability of the American economy. It is this American stability and steadfastness that Muscovites fear. Hence, the first plank in their program is a confusion technique aimed at making men doubt their neighbors, and all of them doubt their government. Even they, fanatical as they are, must entertain an occasional doubt about the historical determinism of capitalistic collapse, else they would not seek to give a push to the "inevitable" by spreading lack of confidence. And this lack of confidence in our society is cultivated by the professional apostate.

To be sure, the new proselytizers are useful in promoting awareness of Communists and communism. They know names, they are conversant with practices, and they can understand the esoteric patter which, though couched in plain English, conveys its meaning only to the initiated. Certainly they are of service to the intelligence branch of our Government. But their to-do has its dangerous as well as its helpful side, and the danger lies in letting them make our flesh creep till we lose faith in our Government, and are full of the same quaking feeling that they themselves acknowledge. That is the kind of thing that may make the whole system with which we live and which we operate run down. It is necessary, in short, to keep a sense of proportion.

Perhaps the hoisting of this new element in our midst into social prominence may be just faddishness. Disraeli noted in one of his novels that no one is petted so much as a political apostate, except, perhaps, a religious one. Nevertheless, the adulation of the extremist is somewhat trying when the problem is to maintain sobriety. In the twenties the people who were not gambling in the stock market were social pariahs. In most cities if you didn't have an ownership interest in some American industry with borrowed money, you soon ran out of conversation, and were cold shouldered. In the thirties it was the thing to be advanced in political thinking—to believe, as Paul Hutchinson said, "It is either on to Moscow or back to sin." If you did not share this belief, you were just too prosaic to have around. Now in the forties strict conformity with the line laid down by the apostates from Moscow is becoming the rule, as if they were the schoolmasters as well as the idols of society.

Ruhr "Trustees"

General Clay would be perpetrating a fraud if he approved the list of 12 Germans just nominated to form the new "Steel Trustee Association" in the Ruhr. A trustee, as defined by Webster, is "one entrusted with property for another." At least half the names submitted to the American and British military governors by Dr. Hermann Puender, chief executive of the bi-zonal economic administration, are those of men representing the old Nazi ownership of Ruhr industries. By approving them as trustees, General Clay would be entrusting the propery of the old owners back to themselves. We cannot believe that the general would deliver such an affront to the Allied peoples who suffered twice in a generation from the warmaking power of Ruhr industries.

The trusteeship plan was outlined in the military government decree of November 10, designed to put the coal, iron and steel industries back under German management. The former Nazi assets, held by the occupying authorities since the surrender, were to be turned over to a Steel Trustee Association of 12 Germans named by the military governors. This group was to draw up plans for dividing the steel industry into smaller units than those of prewar days. Ultimately each of the new companies would get its share of the old assets under its own trustees, and the 12-man group would become a trade association.

The procedure makes sense; it is like that of a bankruptcy proceeding here. But a bankruptcy court in its right mind does not usually appoint as trustees the very men who brought the enterprise in question to ruin. One of the 12 proposed Ruhr trustees, Guenther Sohl, was a director of Krupp's, and was active in managing much of the wartime steel industry of Hitler's Reich. Another, Henrich Dinkelbach, was one of Hitler's chief advisers on tank production before and during the war and is on the books of the occupation authorities as a former member of the Nazi Party.

Clearly the job of reorganizing the vast and complex German steel industry will require experts, but expertness is not enough to fit a German for power. In the six-nation London agreement of December 28, the Western Allies promised "to prevent persons who furthered the aggressive designs of the Nazis from acquiring ownership interests or positions of direction and management in those industries." General Clay cannot approve the 12 names submitted to him without defying and flouting this solemn commitment. It would be a godsend to Communist propaganda all over Europe if we gave power back to those who misused it more than once and who will misuse it again if we give them half a chance.

Note Of Regret

In urging President Truman to name the Republican Senator who had said that the Taft-Hartley Act was "a device for making unions so weak they cannot carry on effective collective bargaining" we overlooked the fact that Senator Wayne Morse had previously identified himself as the Senator to whom the President referred. That was an oversight for which we express our regret to the Senator. From the nature of the President's remarks we assumed that the Senator to whom he was referring was a supporter of the Taft-Hartley Act. Of course, Senator Morse has never been a supporter of that law. We still think that a supporter of the act who would characterize it as "a device for making unions so weak they cannot carry on effective collective bargaining" would be unfit for public office. But that particular criticism would obviously not apply to a legislator who was using the phrase quoted as a means of fighting the bill when it was before the Senate.

We emphatically disagree with Senator Morse's statement of the purpose of the Taft-Hartley Act, although there are various provisions of that act which we have sharply criticized. We do not think that Senator Morse does service to the cause of getting a fair and even-handed labor relations act by repeating this criticism.

Point IV

Point IV in the President's inaugural speech calling for the export of American know-how, especially to backward areas, was of course neither bold nor new. What it did was to give promise of a program, instead of the ad hoc treatment the idea had been getting, as, for instance, in ECA.

This newspaper said on welcoming Sir Stafford Cripps here last September 27 that American know-how was Britain's greatest need—in Britain's farms and fisheries as well as in its African developments. The editorial was widely reprinted in England, and as late as January 28 we find it the occasion for a question in the House of Commons. Hansard reports as follows:

> Mr. Dodds-Parker (Banbury) ". . . Another point to which I would like to draw the attention to the President of the Board of Trade is that, on the day when the Chancellor of the Exchequer arrived in Washington, there was a leader in The Washington Post about 'chemurgy.' Having looked up the word 'chemurgy' in a dictionary, I got in touch with those who were concerned with this matter. The leader was aimed at the Chancellor of the Exchequer.
> "I found that chemurgy is, roughly, the industrial use of by-products of plant-life. I think we can say in this country that we have excellent research departments in Unilvers, Imperial Chemical Industries and other private enterprise organizations, but there is no centralization such as the Americans have through their National Chemurgic Council. I think they are only too willing and anxious to make available to this country the experience which they have gained in this field in the last 15 or 20 years, and I urge the government to pay more attention to this research and find out from the Americans whether this information cannot be made available to us for our future developments.
> "I think that in this connection we have to concentrate on the long-term aspects and on raw materials that can be reproduced and renewed by nature, like plants and water, for instance, rather than on some other materials like coal and oil, which, as far as I know, are not being replaced at the moment . . ."

There was no answer. Doubtless, now that the President has spoken and there is the promise of organized action, there will be answers, not only from Britain but from other countries as well.

Counterthrust

In the battle for men's minds, promises of heaven on earth are important weapons; and the deflation of those promises by exposure of actual conditions is an equally potent counterweapon. Such are the considerations involved in the sparring at Lake Success over investigations of "forced labor." The United States on February 24 introduced a resolution inviting the International Labor Office to continue its previous activity in the matter, taking note of the AFL memorandum on slave labor conditions in the Soviet Union. The resolution specified no particular target for the investigation, but the Soviet representative on the Economic and Social Council served immediate notice that there would be no investigation of Russian labor camps.

In a second countermove, Mr. Tsarapkin brought in his own resolution. As the original American move was by nature an effort to expose and embarrass the Kremlin before the world, so the Soviet resolution attempts to do the same in reverse. It would have a world-wide investigation of forced labor, with "special attention to the situation of the employed and unemployed in all countries where unemployment has not been liquidated." The intent to put capitalism on the spot, especially when coupled with the provision that the investigation be made by a special commission most of whose members would be Communists, is obvious. It is so clear, in fact, as to take most of the sting out of the riposte.

Accustomed as we are to expect a reasonably slick and clever return thrust from the Kremlin, this clumsy proposal seems quite out of character. Its absurd insincerity reflects not only on the good faith but even on the good sense of the Politburo. Having already categorically ruled out any impartial on-the-spot investigation, the Soviet Union can't very well toss the hot potato back to nations which, having no forced labor to conceal, would have nothing to fear from such an inquiry. Indeed, the result might easily be a discovery by the Communist participants that they prefer capitalism once they get a close look at it. And that is one reason the Russians would never allow even their own resolution to be carried out in practice.

Mr. Welles' Column

When Sumner Welles resumed writing his weekly column on international affairs the hope was that his health would permit him to continue his work as before his recent accident. Apparently this is not possible. Mr. Welles has concluded that too much strain is involved in the time and travel necessary to produce his column. Consequently, readers will no longer be treated to his informed discussions which have been a feature of this newspaper for more than five years.

Our feeling of loss is tempered by the desire to see Mr. Welles make a speedy and full recovery. He has spent his lifetime as an active participant in the affairs of which he wrote. His experience, plus his many contacts and the amazing breadth of his background, have made his comments a catalyst in the confusion of current events. His influence as a shaper and critic of American policy will remain even though he discontinues his active role. We shall miss his column, and we know our readers will miss it, too.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Aid To Education

Proposals for Federal aid to education in Congress (S. 246, 496, H.R. 1224, 1850) offer again an apparent choice between approving and financing race and color segregation in public schools and no Federal aid.

These bills accept segregated systems for "minority races," provide Federal money on a basis which only pretends to equal treatment, permit States to perpetuate unequal expenditures for the unfavored groups, state expressly that no change in any State constitution is required (some State constitutions require segregation), and try to pledge future Congresses not to discourage segregation.

What can we do? Use a plan which gives Federal aid at once to unsegregated schools, encourages voluntary reform and richly rewards the reform when achieved. Congress could constitutionally enact a plan under which States without segregation received funds at once. Other States would receive limited funds if they undertook to poll their entire population of voting age on eliminating segregated public schools, within two years, and to follow through a "yes" vote by the necessary changes in five more.

The "limited funds" would be proportioned to the taxes coming to the U. S. from that State. They could be used only to state the issues and take the vote, and to maintain school buildings on a nondiscriminatory basis. The balance of funds allocated to such States would pile up for use when segregation stopped; but if the vote were "no," the funds would revert to the Treasury. The Treasury would take the share of States which would not poll their adults, but they would have a chance each year. FELICE E. DARKOW.

In Defense Of The Post

I was a little late in reading your issue of February 17 and have just read the letter from Mr. George Holland, of Greenbelt, in which he comments on what he feels to be the shortcomings of The Washington Post. Although I disagree with nearly everything he says except his statement that The Post is "almost a great newspaper," I was glad that he wrote his letter and that you printed it. It is surely a good thing that readers should take a proprietary interest in their paper and let its management know what they think of it from time to time, not merely writing to the editor when he has done something to irritate them.

I have been a constant reader of The Post since the days of its resurrection as a real newspaper (in the latter half of the '30s', I believe), and I remember it from 10 or 15 years before that. Here are some of the things I like about it: (1) Its editorials. It is one of the very few newspapers I know of whose editorials are at all worth reading. (2) Its strong stand for civil rights and its reasonably liberal position on economic matters. (3) Herblock, whose consistently high level of performance constantly amazes me. (4) The layout and make-up of the paper, particularly its sparing use of big headlines. (5) The Haworth column, despite all the criticism it is obviously open to. (6) Barnaby.

Two of the things I value The Post for most are just the two that Mr. Holland singles out for particular criticism — its championship of justice for Negroes and its vigilance toward the police. May it never lessen its concern for any aspect of civil liberties.

During the last year or two I have gotten the impression that the editorials of The Post have a somewhat less liberal tendency in economic matters than was the case during and just before the war. Mr. Holland may take some comfort from this. For my part, I am sorry to note it. Still, The Post remains in my opinion about as close to a great newspaper as we are likely to get. I know this doesn't come about by chance, and I should like the publisher and editors to feel that their efforts are appreciated.

Issue In Hungary

I take sharp issue with the intention of Victoria L. Munro, writing in your edition of February 21. She says: "In all the publicity on the Mindszenty case, there is not a word on the basic fact that the real fight is feudalism versus land reform."

On the contrary, the real fight is between a ruthless totalitarianism, which regards man as a soulless robot and tool of the state, and a society which recognizes man as created in the image of God and endowed with certain inalienable rights.

Land reform does not explain the tragedies of Petkov, Masaryk and Cardinal Mindszenty. A world-wide struggle is on, and the dignity of the human being is undergoing furious assault. The present situation in Bulgaria is an indication that that assault is on all fronts.

Those who have so cravenly distorted the processes of law in the imprisonment of Cardinal Mindszenty would do well to ponder the final end of those, who in a prior era of totalitarian madness, cast into jail another worthy churchman, Martin Niemoeller.

Meddling In Indonesia

The latest events in the Security Council do not inspire much confidence in its ability and disinterest, not to speak of its boldness in meddling with the sovereignty of a member of the United Nations.

The day will come when the United States will regret having played the cards of the Indonesian "republic" which never was a republic in the sense that we all understand. It is a skeleton without any foundation. That is why it has never lived up to whatever agreement it has entered into with the Netherlands government.

If the Security Council had not interfered (which, again, it was not entitled to do) the Netherlands arrangements with the Indonesian peoples—of which this "republic" is only a small part—would have been accomplished by now. This puppet republic, with new life blown into it by the Security Council, will constitute a source of never ending unrest.

Three-Way Struggle

May I point out to Senor Maestro of the Spanish Embassy, whose letter appeared February 26, the real issue that is being highlighted by the controversies over the spy trials of clerics in Hungary, Bulgaria and previously in Czechoslovakia.

The Pope has declared a holy war against communism as anti-Christ, and is asking the support of all professing Christians and democratic governments.

Many Protestants and others who work for civil rights and justice under law are protesting against this division between good and evil. They declare the battle to be a three-way fight between: (1.) the proponents of a dictatorship of the left having constitutional but not actual protection under law; (2.) the proponents of a dictatorship of the right which have shown no intention of providing protection under law, believed to be the case in Spain and some parts of South America, all of which have the blessing of the Pope; and (3.) the proponents of a government by free choice of the governed, of declared civil rights for all, protected by due process of law.

The gulf between our aims and that of the Vatican is as great as that between our aims and the practical working of justice in the countries with socialistic governments, with the conspicuous exception of England. It is our belief that where justice under law is assured, Christianity as a way of life will have full protection and will not need an international hierarchy with immunity from national laws to protect the interests of Him whom we declare almighty.

Buying Power

May I take exception to the remark made by Mr. A. D. H. Kaplan, an economist, who appeared before the Joint Economic Committee? Mr. Kaplan thinks burping is good for babies and the economy.

Our Government and big business, through taxes and profits, have burped and burped the buying public to the verge of a depression. The President and the Congress had better call in some economists who know what baby needs burping.

I do not think it takes an economist to see that any decrease in buying power will mean unemployment. We are living in 1949, not prewar, and our national debt and national budget cannot be sustained on prewar economy. It should not take an economist to see that no man can afford to repay a deflated dollar with an inflated dollar; that will be the result when wages and farm prices drop.

Controlled economic stability is the best weapon against depressions and communism. Buying power is the sustaining element for production. Don't burp the farmer; insure his buying power with parity for he consumes one third of all manufactured products and his purchases will stabilize our economy.

Supply And Demand

After many years as a would-be expert on mathematical problems, I am completely "baffled" by the uncanny spectacle of seeing grain prices drop and at the same time the cost of bakery products remain virtually unchanged. The difficulty now is to try to figure out by what method of mental acrobatics the law of supply and demand seems to have been so thoroughly eliminated. S. G. GIRB.

Southern Sectionalism

The filibuster of Southern Senators over the mild change in the cloture rule proposed by the Hayden resolution proves once more that in their scheme of values the South comes first, the Democratic Party second, and the Nation last of all.

The filibuster has traditionally been the last refuge of these Southern politicians and their predecessors against majority rule, the performance of Democratic platform pledges, and the fulfillment of the promises of American democracy. Their incorrigible sectionalism has long been the bane of our public life and an incubus upon social progress in this country.

U. S. Children Versus British

By Malvina Lindsay

What Manners Mean

MORE ELBOW rubbing between peoples has brought the American child into the spotlight of appraisal. And while his initiative is often admired, his manners are deplored. He is frequently compared to the British child, who generally shows more surface respect at least for parents and teachers.

Visiting Britishers and other Europeans are often surprised at what some call the informality, others the rudeness of American children. A present visitor, Mrs. Dermot Morrah, magistrate of London's Tower Bridge Juvenile Court, thinks the average American parent permits rudeness on the part of young children, particularly preschool ones, that would shock most British parents. She thinks there may be a connection between the numerous juvenile crimes of violence she has encountered in her study of American juvenile courts and the parental laxity which produces ill-mannered, poorly disciplined children.

Orderly behavior of British children made a pronounced first impression on the American teachers who went to England under the teacher exchange program. Later some of them felt that more important human values were being lost in the British schools through too great emphasis on discipline.

MEANWHILE, a cry against "over-indulgence" of children has arisen in this country. Some educators are asking for a return to middle ground in discipline. They say the swing, accentuated by the early progressive schools, has gone too far from the stern old patriarchal bossing. But recently Dr. Gerald A. Koakem, professor of education at Pittsburgh University, while subscribing to the over-indulgence theory, also maintained that American children were more self-possessed and better mannered than they were 25 years ago.

The demand for sterner discipline as a magic cure-all always arises when children seem to be getting out of hand. Last year when a London prison commissioner's report showed youthful crime on the increase in Britain, the author blamed "over-indulgent mothers" and declared parents should write "firm and instructive letters" to their delinquent sons. In this country as well, judges and others ignorant of child psychology, and of the complex causes of juvenile delinquency, often make equally superficial and antiquated suggestions.

One American teacher's experience in England shows the difference in methods of child rearing and teaching there and in this country. Though a great admirer of the orderly children she found in her school room, she discovered that the teacher was respected for her position rather than her personality. There was little personal contact between teacher and pupils, and seldom, except perhaps in boarding schools, the development of that close bond of friendship so often found between American teachers and pupils. Nor was there much contact of teacher with parents or much show of interest by parents in the way their children were being taught.

BRITISH temperament is partly responsible for the more orderly British child. British people are generally regarded as the most self-disciplined in the world. Americans, on the other hand, have a heritage of more mercurial temperament and of rebellion against authority—built perhaps on their resistance to the symbolical parent, Europe, that their forbears fled.

However, there is growing feeling in this country that since American children are destined to more and more contact with other peoples, they need to be equipped with more social tools, including manners, poise and self discipline, for getting on in a more crowded and complex world.

Educators here generally think the American system of child rearing and teaching best for American children. They admit there is too much spoiling of children, both by over-indulgence and neglect, and frequently too much of the wrong kind of love and of freedom. The best answer to the charge of ill manners levelled at American children they say, is more parent training. They point out that parents who know their job won't have to depend on authoritarianism to win respect. And the child who respects parents and teachers for what they are rather than because they are symbols of authority becomes a better citizen in a democratic system.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Europe, 1949: The Stalemate

IN THE long night of a transatlantic air journey, it is not easy for the returning traveler to sort out positive conclusions. Random impressions float too insistently through the mind—the pale beauty of a sunny winter day in Rome—the extreme oddity of spats when worn by a belligerent Yugoslav commissar—the dreary reminders, in an evening with the occupiers of Germany, of a pretentious little colonial dinner party in Rangoon before the war.

One conclusion nonetheless stands out, even in the stuffy murk of the airplane cabin. In Europe, a stalemate has been reached in the world struggle between the West and Soviet empire. And this is true because the Soviet power drive to capture western Europe has been decisively frustrated.

It is tempting to forget the magnitude of this event, and to argue that the Soviet drive westward was always bound to fail anyway, because the Kremlin was not yet ready to employ the Red army. But the truth is that only 15 short months ago the fate of western Europe balanced on a knife edge. If the United States had not then held out a helping hand, the boldest Italian leaders have confessed to this correspondent that they would have lost the heart to resist the Communists. In that event, Italy would have been lost. After a longer or shorter interlude of dictatorship of the Right, France would have gone also. And a whole long, terrible chain reaction would have been set in resistless train.

THAT DANGER has passed now. The Marshall Plan gave the democratic forces courage and means to carry on their struggle. In the more hopeful atmosphere thus created, the political and economic energies of the Europeans themselves were partly liberated. Everywhere there has occurred a patchy but decisive improvement, and everywhere in western Europe, the Communist parties are in retreat.

This does not mean, however, that the American responsibility ends with the Marshall Plan. New problems are pressing forward. The first problem we must tackle with bold imagination is the problem of our own relationship to the internal politics of the western European countries we are aiding. Here we must face an important fact. Although the major Communist danger has passed, western Europe will never be restored to full political health as long as the Communist Parties control the labor movements.

Fortunately, the Communists' hold on this basic asset is being challenged by non-Communist labor leaders. And simultaneously the Communists' own leadership has been weakened from within by the Kremlin's use of the western European labor groups as mere naked tools of Russian foreign policy.

This is the meaning of the Cachin-Togliatti "peace offensive," which is intended to muddle the mass of workers. This is also the meaning of the brutal purge of the Communist labor chiefs in France, which is meant to destroy all possible "deviationists." As is suggested by the walkout of Moche, the French mine workers' leader, these tactics only reveal a grave, fundamental weakness. During the next year or two, the non-Communist groups will have an excellent chance to capture the French and Italian labor movements from the Communists, provided one condition is fulfilled.

THESE GROUPS must necessarily stand forward as pro-American. Their position will be undermined, and the whole task of rebuilding a healthy non-Communist Left in Europe will be brusquely halted, if America meanwhile stands forward as the champion of European reaction. In our own hardheaded interests, America must appear as the enemy of European reaction. And we must do so even if this means championing social and economic measures which are not contemplated and may even seem abhorrent in our own comfortable country.

Second, and still more fundamental, the problem of security also awaits solution. No one should deceive himself with the expectation that full European recovery can occur until Europe feels genuinely secure from Russian aggression. To repeat the simplest example, you cannot persuade the French businessmen and peasants to begin investing their five billion dollars of hoarded capital, or even to stop hoarding their current earnings, while they continue to believe that "the Russians can march to Brest." Equally, no one should deceive himself with the expectation that the proposed Atlantic Pact is more than the beginning of a solution of this security problem.

The problem is global, and the ultimate responsibility rests almost wholly on the United States. There can be no real security so long as such issues as the defense of Germany and the future of the Middle and Far East have not been faced. Above all, there can be no real security while the Atlantic Pact and other measures that may be taken merely represent the pooling of weakness.

A small program of peacetime lend-lease for western Europe will not create the needed strength. Indeed, the needed strength cannot be created at all, so long as business-as-usual remains the watchword of the Administration in Washington. A grim American effort, both to place our own forces on a footing of minimum peacetime readiness, and to strengthen our allies, is now absolutely essential.

The European stalemate is a perilous victory, in the sense that it will moderate or end the European crises that have stimulated our efforts thus far. But if we are so shortsighted that we can make no great efforts except in a state of hysteria, we shall deserve the fate we shall probably meet.

House Foreign Affairs Unit Selects Ira Bennett as Aide

Bennett

It named to a similar post Jefferson Franklin Ray, jr., a Far Eastern expert attached to the State Department's division of occupied powers.

Both men will draw salaries of $10,330 a year.

Bennett, 80, is a cofounder of the National Press Club and a former president of the Gridiron Club. He was editor of The Washington Post from 1908 to 1933, serving previously as Washington correspondent for the San Francisco Chronicle, city editor of the San Diego Union and editor of the Lower Californian, Ensenada, Mexico.

Committee aides said he is an authority on American history, and is credited with having drafted the World War I Czechoslovakian declaration of independence. Now a free-lance magazine writer, he has specialized in foreign affairs.

A Republican, Bennett was born in Lyons, Iowa.

Barkley On A Tightrope

VICE PRESIDENT Alben W. Barkley, the genial, kindly Kentuckian, this week finds himself with the floodlight of national interest full upon him. He stands at the point of decision between the Democratic Party of the South and the Democratic Party of the North.

Childs

The ruling that he makes as presiding officer of the Senate in this beginning phase of the fight over the President's civil rights program is certain to have a profound effect in party politics. Ruling against the South, as he is almost certain to do, Barkley will alienate many of the closest friends that he has made in his 22 years in the Senate.

No one could have foreseen this unfamiliar role for the honest harmonizer who grew up in Paducah, Ky., on the periphery of the deep South. No one at that dispirited Democratic Convention in Philadelphia last summer could have anticipated this moment.

It was Barkley's Senate colleagues—many from the South—who pushed his nomination as Vice President. They argued that he had served the party well and faithfully and now he deserved the honor as capstone for his career. And though he would not be elected, so practically everyone believed, he would still be senior Senator from Kentucky.

THE SENATE rules are like sticky flypaper. They trap the unwary and even Barkley with all his knowledge and experience finds himself in a tight spot.

The proposal is to change the rules of the Senate so that any filibuster can be blocked by a two-thirds vote. That is to say, unlimited debate could under any parliamentary situation be shut off when two thirds of the Senators present voted to end it.

There are several stages in the adoption of that proposal. It is in phase No. 1 that a ruling from Barkley will be called for. He will be asked to decide whether the Senate has the right to shut off debate—by a two-thirds vote—on a motion to call up the proposal itself.

If he rules no, then the Southerners will filibuster indefinitely, the Senate will be stalemated, and the Truman program so delayed as to be seriously jeopardized. By ruling yes he has a chance of ending the whole business in a fairly short time so the Senate can move on to the foreign relief program, new labor legislation, the tax bill and the rest of the complicated measures that the Administration desires.

You have to say "chance" because even after he has ruled, Barkley may find himself in trouble. Certain Senators who would favor civil rights legislation may hesitate to go along with a change in the rules that can have such far-reaching consequences. They sincerely believe that the right of unlimited debate is an essential safeguard of liberty.

IN RULING yes, Barkley will have to go against not one precedent but at least two in recent times. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, as President of the Senate, ruled last year that a motion to call up a bill was not subject to a two-thirds cloture vote.

Out of loyalty Republicans may feel compelled to support the Vandenberg precedent. At that time Barkley talked against Vandenberg's position.

In 1946 a Democratic Senator, Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, was presiding officer. In a surprise move, Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico called up a fair-employment practices bill which immediately froze the Senate in a Southern filibuster.

To end that freeze McKellar made a ruling that had many of the implications of Vandenberg's later decision. So Barkley will have to go against both a Democratic and Republican precedent.

Seen against this background, the split in the Democratic Party looks almost as deep as the division that separates the Republicans into two or three camps. With perhaps one exception, the Southerners are united on this issue.

It can rise in still another way to bedevil the Senate majority. At the left of the Northern wing is Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, who has said that he will insist on including in a new labor law a provision outlawing discrimination by unions and by management. That could precipitate another stalemate.

The man who stands in the middle of the balancing board is not to be envied. All of Barkley's good will, his tact and his finesse will be called on if he is to find his way out of this dead end.

Welles to Quit Writing Column

Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, has decided to discontinue writing his weekly column that appeared in The Washington Post.

Although recovering steadily from severe frostbite, which once threatened amputations, Welles said he decided to stop the writing because it required more time and travel than his health now permits.

His first newspaper column appeared on December 1, 1943, two months after his resignation from the State Department.

Another Pact Session Slated By Negotiators

At least one more meeting will be required to complete the final draft of the Atlantic Security Pact being negotiated by Secretary of State Acheson and representatives of six foreign powers.

Secretary Acheson met yesterday in a nearly two-hour session with the negotiators for Canada, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, and British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks said later:

"We will have another meeting this week as we proceed steadily along."

Secretary Acheson is expected to have further word at his press conference today on the completion date of the treaty draft. Last Friday, he said it was hoped that negotiations would end this week.

No details of the proposed pact have yet been officially disclosed, although it is known that the key section provides mutual assistance assurances by participating nations, with armed force, if necessary, as determined by each nation.

The final version of the draft will be sent to each of the nations before the text is disclosed here, and it has been expected the draft can be released next week.

More controversial than the pact itself is legislation to provide military aid to participating countries, to put "teeth" in the pact.

This legislation is being prepared at the State Department, and will provide a reported one billion dollars in over-all aid to pact-signers—which eventually will probably include Norway and other Atlantic area countries—plus about another billion dollars of military aid to such countries as Turkey, Greece and Korea.

Aid Debate Shut Off By Attlee

London, March 1 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee shut the door today on the embarrassing debate over whether Britain still needs dollar aid, and announced he will visit Germany for four days, starting Friday.

Britain, he told Parliament, still needs American help.

An official announcement said Attlee will visit Germany "for the purpose of inspecting the British arrangements for the Berlin airlift." An official source, however, said British national and international policies are so affected by German affairs that the Prime Minister wants a first-hand impression of conditions in the defeated country.

Wants Subject Dropped

Attlee appealed to Parliament today "in the national interest" to drop the whole subject of Britain's need for dollar aid from America. Tersely, he said the need still exists.

Christopher Mayhew, Foreign Undersecretary, had stirred up a young tempest and drawn American questions of whether his country still needs help, when he made a speech at Lake Success last week. He told the U. N. Economic and Social Council that the Labor government no longer is worried about recovery, and now can concentrate on social experiments.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, tried to settle things Saturday with a statement repudiating Mayhew's words. Cripps said publicly Britain cannot get along without further European Recovery Program aid.

Attlee went before Parliament today and promptly had the subject tossed into his lap by questioners. He replied that Cripps' statement expressed the government's view.

Questions Turned Aside

"Every now and again, statements are made which, when taken quite apart from their context, may cause difficulties," he said.

Oliver Stanley, a Conservative, demanded to know what Attlee is going to do to assure that the British people are not jeopardized "by irresponsible statements by ministers who have nothing to do with this matter at all."

"As this matter has now been dealt with, I deprecate further questions in the national interests," was Attlee's chilly reply.

United States Ambassador Lewis Douglas and W. Averell Harriman, roving ambassador of the European Cooperation Administration, had a two-hour discussion of ERP problems with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin here today. American informants said they gave particular attention to the part we it Germany is to play in ERP this year.

Continuation of Economic Aid To Nationalist China Urged

By Murrey Marder

Post Reporter

Continued economic aid to Nationalist China at the rate of 20 million dollars a month was recommended yesterday by Roger D. Lapham, chief of the American-aid mission to China.

"That doesn't mean military aid," Lapham told reporters, but is about the present amount of monthly aid to China in the form of food, cotton, and other relief.

Out of the 275 million dollars appropriated to China under the Foreign Aid Act, about 80 million dollars is left, including 68 million dollars earmarked for long-term reconstruction, he said.

If American policy does not involve aid to areas now held by the Communist armies, "it might very well be that we would not need anything like 240 million dollars" for the next year, he said.

Lapham discussed the recommendations earlier before the Joint Congressional Committee on Foreign Aid. Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the "watchdog committee," said Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman, to whom Lapham reports, was present at the meeting and did not object to Lapham's recommendation.

McCarran also reported Lapham as saying that a stable government could and should be set up for Nationalist China.

At his press conference, Lapham said it is "quite possible" for the Communists to move south from the Yangtze River, and if so, there is "little likelihood of any effective military operations" against them.

About four million dollars' worth of relief goods in Tientsin and flour valued at $75,000 in Peiping have been captured by the Communists, he said.

There was no indication that continuation of aid to China at the rate of 20 million dollars a month marks any change in present Administration policy toward China.

This policy, as expressed last week to a group of Republican Representatives by Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson, is to wait for the "dust to settle" before determining further American action, in view of Communist military successes.

Congress previously appropriated 125 million dollars in military aid for China, but that money has already been allotted.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee met yesterday on the $5,580,000,000 European recovery aid-extension bill, but took no final action on it, although another executive session was scheduled for today.

Meanwhile, however, there were these new developments on the Marshall Plan:

1. An added 100 million dollars to the European aid legislation, to purchase in the United States such surplus foods as apples, pears, nuts, citrus fruits, etc., was urged by Senators Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) and Guy Cordon (R., Oreg.).

This is one of a series of expected amendment efforts, to attempt to win authorization for a broad variety of surplus American commodities. ECA is bitterly opposed to making ERP a "surplus disposal agency" through such measures, which it says will wreck the aid program.

2. The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee unanimously reported out an amended version of a bill sponsored by Representative Schuyler Otis Bland (D., Va.), to guarantee that 50 per cent of all foreign aid cargo—and 50 per cent of all freight charges—will be carried by American merchant ships.

The percentages would apply to all shipping, on a country-by-country basis, whether or not the cargoes originate here. A committee member said the added guarantee of half the transportation charges was to insure that American ships would not be assigned cargoes involving only low shipping costs. Ships chartered by the Army and Navy would not be included as a basis for determining proportion of American ships, he said.

'Paisan' Creator Might Drop By

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT THE TOWN: It's perfectly possible a stocky, dark-haired chap of forty-odd years will be around town today or tomorrow, though you can't exactly count on it . . . He's Roberto Rossellini, the Italian who made "Open City," which has been the biggest world-wide hit of all Italian films, and "Paisan," which at last reaches the Trans-Lux tomorrow after having won all manner of international prizes for 1947 . . . Rossellini's a rare bird about making movies . . . Just as the boys at Fort Lee used to do in the early days of the flicks, Roberto makes 'em up as he goes along, shooting his stories virtually off the cuff and using outmoded equipment which is the best his shattered land provides . . . Born with a silver spoon in his mouth, Rossellini didn't get near the movies till his father died in 1934, when he had to earn a living . . . He worked up from sound dubbing and seems to have done just about everything . . . During the war he lost 74 pounds from fear when the Germans came . . . From those evil days he spun the engrossing "Open City," and as the Allied armies crawled up Italy, he got the idea for "Paisan" from four GIs he met one day outside Rome . . . They kept calling him "Paisan," and from that grew the notion for the Italian adventure of assorted Yanks.

AFTER COPPING the Gotham bigwigs a few weeks ago, Rossellini sped out to the Coast, where he's been discussing a picture deal with Ingrid Bergman and Sam Goldwyn . . . Four of his latest films have yet to be released here: "Germany, Year Zero," a postwar study of a Hitler-bred boy; "The Machine Which Kills the Wicked," "The Beggar of Rome" and "Amore," the last being two short films, "The Human Voice" and "The Miracle." . . . The Military Order of the World Wars is hoping Rossellini will be here for tomorrow night's gala performance at the Trans-Lux (where it opens earlier in the day), but even the Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani have their fingers crossed about the independently-minded director showing up . . . He wants to, but he's always the type that might prefer, at the last moment, to go fishing.

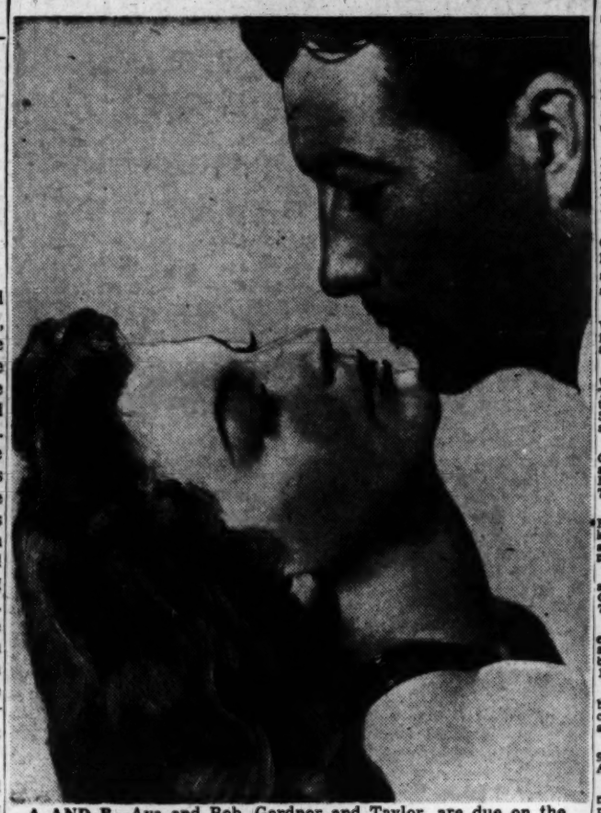
REPRESENTATIVE Emanuel Celler deserves the thanks of this theaterless community for introducing a bill to reconvert the Belasco Theater into use as a legitimate playhouse . . . His practical idea for the Government to take a hand in this shameful tangle deserves the strongest support, but at the moment there's nothing much anyone can do . . . His bill has been referred to the House Public Works Committee, but yesterday its members had hardly had time to consider the idea . . . The Congressmen I talked with all stated they had been good theatergoers in the past, that they missed it now, that they thought "something should be done." . . . But they unanimously begged off concrete comment on the grounds the bill hadn't yet reached their attention . . . "Give me a week," one committee member begged, "and I'll be glad to talk with you about it."

THE WEATHER DIP has played hob with the scheduled opening of Sidney Lust's open-air, drive-in theater at Beltsville . . . The sign says: "Opening Sunday with 'The Snake Pit'" . . . That was put up before the big freeze, and now it's maybe yes, maybe no . . . But the bigger news at the Beltsville outdoor spot is that this summer its films will be the same as those running at the top neighborhoods, quite an advance for the drive-in world . . . Single features, no doubles, also will be part of the coming season's policy.

THE LITTLE had planned a double bill today to succeed the long-run "Hamlet," but it's wisely thought better of the idea . . . The new feature will be "Don't Take It to Heart," which proved delightfully surprising at the Playhouse for a single week just before "Symphonie Pastorale" . . . You find Richard Green and Patricia Medina heading a group of amusing British character players in a daft yarn about a ghost, an ancient castle and an incredible court trial . . . Good stuff.

THERE WILL BE plainclothesmen aplenty up at the Ambassador this morning, but don't get worried . . . The policemen, in uniform and otherwise, will be on tap for a special showing of "He Walked by Night," a semidocumentary from Los Angeles Police files, via Eagles-Lion, winding up with a chase in the sewers of the City of Angels . . . With Richard Basehart and Scott Brady in the leads, the picture opens Friday at the Warner and Ambassador.

WASHINGTONIANS will be looking at the word from New York on the three-day conference on the state of the theater opening this afternoon at the Hotel Astor . . . Unique in the history of the theater, this ambitious meeting has its work cut out for it and citizens of a Capital without a theater will be interested in its outcome.



A AND B—Ava and Bob, Gardner and Taylor, are due on the Capitol screen tomorrow in a turbulent Central American yarn, "The Bribe"

Witness Quiz Right Granted

From now on, defendants at preliminary hearings in Prince Georges County will have the right to question State witnesses, Trial Magistrates Arthur P. Owens of Hyattsville and Allen Bowie of Upper Marlboro said yesterday.

Both had received letters from Maryland Attorney General Hall Hammond branding as unconstitutional their previous preliminary hearings procedure under which defendants could question State witnesses only if they themselves took the stand.

Hammond ruled Monday the Maryland Constitution guarantees the right of the defendant to question prosecution witnesses in preliminary hearings.

Judge Owen said yesterday he had never regarded a preliminary hearing as a criminal prosecution, but that "we'll go along" with the attorney general.

Trial Magistrate Bowie said "very few cases have come up where the question was raised," and that he also would abide by the ruling.

Sweden To Sell Czechs Ball-Bearings, Steel

Prague, March 1 (NYHT).—Czechoslovakia will receive from Sweden more than $1,300,000 worth of ball-bearings and steel for ball-bearing manufacture under the 1949 trade pact between the two countries, it was learned today.

The United States has banned ball-exports to Communist nations.

Sub[illegible] in Underwater Collision With Cargo Ship in Caribbean War Games

By James J. Strebig

With the Atlantic fleet on Caribbean maneuvers, March 1 (AP).—The submarine Trumpetfish has been damaged in an underwater collision with the cargo ship Marquette in the current war games. No one was injured, the Navy said.

The collision was disclosed in a summary of action yesterday during the Navy's "most realistic" training exercises in peacetime. The extent of damage to the two ships was not disclosed but the absence of casualties indicated it was minor.

The pace of the mock war was accelerated, meanwhile, with the umpire's score card showing heavy losses by both sides.

The "enemy," designated "aggressor nation," attacked the fleet unit with submarines and marine aircraft. As a cost of 37 planes, "aggressor" was judged to have "sunk" five ships, including a light cruiser, while the submarines "sank" a small carrier and a cargo ship and put two destroyers out of action.

In doing so, "aggressor" lost five submarines, including a guppy-type equipped with snorkel tube for underwater breathing.

Meanwhile, the fleet force and Navy planes dumped hundreds of tons of explosives on two small beach areas of Vieques Island where the "enemy" is dug in. The island is to be invaded Wednesday in the climax of the current phase of the six-week games.

Legislators and military leaders watched the 100-minute bombardment of the beach areas from the command ship USS Pocono. The top ranking foreign observer, Admiral Sir Rhoderick McGrigor, commander of the British home fleet, called it "most impressive and very realistic."

4000 Troops in Feint

As part of today's demonstration, some 4000 troops in small craft approached within a half-mile of the beaches under cover of the closely coordinated sea and air assault. It was a feint. They turned back to avoid maneuvering in the area so recently under fire, where there might be unexploded shells and bombs. The actual landing is to be made on a different beach, under simulated gunfire.

A number of surprises are expected from the "enemy" forces Wednesday. Underwater demolition teams of the American forces reported that a deep trench had been dug along the beach by enemy bulldozers. Military experts said they were unable to figure out why immediately.

Under the rules, there is some doubt that the observers aboard the Pocono got to see the show at all. Ten minutes before the assault began an "enemy" plane roared low over the ship, strafing and bombing it.

Adoption Racket Charged to Her

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. R. P. SATTERTHWAITE, 56, a former social worker and divorcee, was charged in New York with wholesale operation of an illegal Nation-wide baby adoption business. She pleaded not guilty and was released in $500 bond. Authorities said she sometimes transported infants by airplane

Larkin Promoted

Gen. Aurand Named Army Pacific Chief

President Truman yesterday nominated Lieut. Gen. Henry Spiese Aurand to be commanding general, United States Army, Pacific.

Maj. Gen. Thomas Bernard Larkin was nominated to be director of logistics with the rank of lieutenant general.

The nominations were sent to the Senate along with the promotion of Stanley Lonzo Scott to the permanent rank of major general. He now holds temporary two-star rank.

These temporary brigadier generals were named permanently to that rank: Albert Pierson, Williston Birkhimer Palmer and Robert Miller Montague.

Appointments to the temporary rank of major general went to Brig. Gens. Vernon Edwin Prichard, Francis Henry Lanahan, jr. Roy Charles Lemach Graham, William Kelly Harrison and George David Shea.

Barbers Back Measure to Limit Hours

District Commissioners held a closed hearing yesterday on a bill to force local barber shops to close one day a week and to limit daily hours.

The hearing was on a bil introduced by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), now before the Senate District Committee. Officials of the Central Labor Union, AFL, and Charles J. Bovello, representing Local 239, Barbers Union, AFL, supported the measure. No opponents were present.

Under the proposed legislation, all licensed and operating barbers would be polled on which day should be designated as closing day and what hours shops should be open. The District Board of Barber Examiners would then designate the preference of the majority as the official hours. Violators would be subject to a penalty of not less than $25.

If the designated closing day conflicts with the "tenets of his religion," the barber may request the board to permit the alternative of closing on his Sabbath day.

Two G. U. Professors Forming Law Firm

Nicholas J. Chase and Edward Bennett Williams, both professors of law at Georgetown University, are forming a law firm here with offices at the Hill Building, it was announced yesterday.

5 More DPs For Here Due In N. Y. Today

The SS Marine Shark, carrying 548 displaced persons brought to this country by the International Refugee Organization, is scheduled to dock in New York harbor today about 9 a. m., the IRO announced yesterday.

Among the immigrants, fifth boatload of DPs to reach the United States, are five persons destined for the District, 23 scheduled for Maryland and two for Virginia.

Isadore Platt, 3922 3d st. nw., who is bringing over Elia Szuster, 49-year-old Pole and an assistant rabbi.

Theodore Phillips, 5611 14th st. nw., who with the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society is sponsoring the Gruenberger family, including Armin, 49; his wife, Iren, 37, and two children, Geza, 2, and Lea, 8 months.

House Group Cuts Funds

project for a better Government accounting system. Fourteen new jobs will be created to handle this plan, but a slight reduction would have to be made in other agency activities.

PUBLIC DEBT: A cut of $650,000 which would force a small reduction in this agency . . . CUSTOMS: The committee frowned on the bureau plan to add 26 new jobs here. In the field, Customs volunteered to wipe out 114 jobs . . . NARCOTICS: No change in its 287-man stal . . . SECRET SERVICE: It asked for 33 new jobs. The committee approved funds for only 8 in making a $100,000 cut . . . MINT: It was reduced $137,000 but the bureau would have $50,000 more than it has for this year

FEDERAL SUPPLY: The committee demanded a curtailment of its activities in slashing its budget by $350,000. The bureau would have about $65,000 more than it has for this year . . . COAST GUARD: Its civilian strength would remain unchanged—739 jobs. The committee believes the agency has too many officers in the higher ranks. However, it permitted an increase in officers and men from 21,880 to 23,000.

POSTOFFICE: The committee indorsed the department's request for higher postal rates to offset an expected operating deficit of more than 400 million dollars next year. Hearings on the rate increase will start Monday before the House Civil Service Committee.

The committee ordered the departmental staff here to operate throughout 1950 on its present staff. It turned down a request from the Bureau of Accounts to add 16 persons to its staff. There would be some increase in the half-million-man staff outside of this city. However, the committee, in making reductions, explained it didn't believe that postal business would continue to increase at the rate predicted by postal officials.

PAY BILL: It was delayed for another two weeks yesterday by the Murray subcommittee of the House Civil Service Committee. Members said they needed more time to study the proposed executive pay scale.

The subcommittee is agreed to $330 retroactive pay raises for the 6000 foreign service and the 7500 classified employes of the District government. Also, there is no controversy over the proposed increase from $15,000 to $25,000 for Cabinet members.

The debate is over pay raises for members of the little cabinet, boards, commissions, and agency heads. Several GOP members want to limit raises to $2500 each; another bloc is for cutting the proposed raises by $2500 each, and a third bloc is supporting the Miller bill as it's written.

NOTES: The AFL's American Federation of Government Employes is on record as opposed to decentralization of Civil Service activities as proposed by the Hoover Commission . . . Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) has in a bill which would require an accounting of the $2500 expense allowance paid to each member of Congress . . . Senator Hill (D., Ala.) has in a resolution which would permit an employe with 51 years of service in the Senate restaurant to retire on full pay . . . Arthur G. Thomas is retiring from Social Security after 36 years of Federal service. He was once chairman of the Federal purchasing board and he served for 13 years in the old bureau of efficiency.

HOOVER COMMISSION: It held its last session yesterday. It has agreed on several reports to be issued. Chairman Hoover appointed a subcommittee composed of Carter Manasco, James Pollock, and Arthur S. Flemming to write a final report to summarize its many recommendations.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 1 (AP).—Grains followed an uneven course at the Board of Trade today. Starting on the weak side, an advance developed in wheat and corn on some commercial buying. Later, selling developed, which brokers looked on as liquidation. Toward the close all grains rallied from the day's low.

From the start the market displayed nervous tendencies and was easily influenced. Some brokers expressed disappointment at the amount of corn the Government had absorbed in recent buying. They also said traders felt the heavy Government buying in wheat was offset by the present crop prospects.

At the close wheat was 1¾ to 2 cents lower, corn was unchanged to ¼ lower, oats were ⅝ to 1 cent lower, rye was 1 cent lower, soybeans were 1½ to 2¼ lower and lard was 13 to 25 cents a hundredweight lower.

C. H. Johnson Named Local C. & P. Head

By S. Oliver Goodman

Clarence H. Johnson, auditor for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has been elected vice president and general manager, it was announced yesterday.

Johnson succeeds Frederick G. Macarow, who was elected vice president, personnel relations, for the four C. & P. companies operating in Washington, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Johnson

Macarow

L. G. Rector, auditor of receipts for the C. & P. of West Virginia, has been appointed to succeed Johnson as auditor of the Washington company.

Johnson, a native of Maine, graduated from Bowdoin College in 1928. He joined the C. & P. the same year as a student accountant in Washington and later transferred to the C. & P. of Baltimore as an accountant. In 1936 he went with the C. & P. of Virginia in Richmond where he held positions of increasing importance. In 1945 he returned to the Washington company where he was appointed auditor.

Macarow began his telephone career in 1920 as a student engineer with the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. In 1928 he joined the C. & P. of Baltimore as district traffic manager and in 1929 transferred to the Washington company as general traffic manager. His service includes five years as general personnel manager for the four C. & P. companies. He was elected vice president and general manager of the Washington company in May, 1948.

OFFERING: Folger Nolan, Inc., of Washington, is a member of a syndicate offering two million dollars worth of State of West Virginia road bonds, running from 1949 to 1973. The bonds are priced to yield .06 to 1.75 per cent, depending on maturity.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Lawrence A. Hyland, formerly with Radio Research Co. of Washington, has been elected a vice president of Bendix Aviation Corp. . . . Whitney Tharin has been named executive secretary of the newly-opened Washington office of the National Potato Council . . . Neal G. Adair, editor of Motor magazine, will address members of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, at a dinner meeting Monday in Hotel 2400 . . . William N. Margolis, assistant director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, will explain Government's role in collective bargaining at a meeting Thursday night of the Washington Personnel Association in the Statler Hotel.

PROGRESS: Peoples Life Insurance Co., whose main offices are in Washington, showed total insurance in force of $374,886,449 at the end of 1948, a gain of $33,720,506 for the year. Presidents S. W. Hauser added that admitted assets at year-end aggregated $47,329,350, an increase of $6,024,609.

ODD LOTS: Southern Oxygen Co., Inc., of Washington declared regular dividend of 50 cents a common share, payable March 31 to stock of record March 21 . . . District Theaters Corp. voted quarterly dividend of 10 cents a common share, payable April 1 to stock of record March 15 . . . Granite City Steel Co. cut price of cold rolled sheets $10 a ton . . . Pontiac Motor passed a milestone in its 21-year history this week with completion of its three millionth car . . . Dun & Bradstreet reports business failures in week ended February 24 numbered 180, compared with 93 in same 1948 week . . . Tennessee Eastman Corp. has cut price of cellulose acetate plastics to 35 cents a pound from 42 cents.

GAIN NARROWS: A slowing down in the rate of increase in retail sales was cited by the magazine Sales Management as "significant indicator of the return of the buyers' market." The magazine forecast March retail sales at 5 per cent above a year ago, an advance it called "one of the smallest annual percentage increases recorded in the postwar period."

EARNINGS: Burroughs Adding Machine Co. (parent company only) reported net income of $12,582,134, or $2.52 a common share, for 1948, compared with $6,255,775, or $1.26 a share, in 1947. Other earnings reports:

Louis Retirement Sets Off Struggle for Control of Title

New York, March 1 (AP).—Joe Louis' retirement as heavyweight champion today set the stage for a tremendous promotional battle over control of the abdicated throne and the prestige and huge profits that go with it.

At stake is not only the millions that go with promoting heavyweight title fights and the money harvested from fight movies but the unknown riches that may be tapped by television.

It also may result in the shifting of the boxing spotlight from its long-time center in New York to Chicago and possibly London. Chicago's central location makes it an ideal spot for the televising of fights when video goes coast-to-coast.

London figures in the contention because of Promoter Jack Solomons' hold on two world titles and his latest bid for the heavyweight crown.

Squared off for the conflict are three, and possibly four, moneyed organizations.

They are:

1. The newly formed International Boxing Club to be run by Louis, James D. Norris, one of the world's biggest grain operators and stadium owner, and Arthur M. Wirtz, partner with Sonja Hiene in ice shows, a wholesale liquor company and vast Chicago real estate properties.

2. The Tournament of Champions, Inc., backed by rich radio, television and entertainment interests. The T. of C. is controlled by the Columbia Broadcastng System, Music Corporation of America, a giant organization in the entertainment field, and Allied Syndicates, which is a public relations firm. David Charney of Allied Syndicates is president of the T. of C.

3. Solomons, the British promoter. Solomons, built up a fortune selling fish and as a bookmaker. He promoted the Gus Lesnevich-Freddie Mills light-heavyweight championship fight in London last summer and now controls the 175-pound title with Mills, and the flyweight championship with Rinty Monaghan.

4. The Twentieth Century Sporting Club, allied with Madison Square Garden, in promoting fights in Madison Square Garden and outdoor shows in Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds.

The big "if" there is whether Promoter Mike Jacobs will carry out his decision to retire and whether Madison Square Garden will continue in partnership with an outfit whose chief asset was Joe Louis.

Jacobs, still convalescing from a stroke suffered over two years ago, parlayed his connection with Louis into an almost monopolistic hold on bigtime boxing in this country.

But Jacobs' empire slowly has been crumbling. A year ago the T. of C. muscled into the picture by staging two middleweight championship fights in New Jersey.

Today it has an exclusive contract with Marcel Cerdan, the world middleweight champion from France. It runs weekly indoor shows at the small indoor Manhattan Center in New York. It is dickering for the use of the Polo Grounds in New York in order to run outdoor shows this summer.

If the T. of C. gains the use of the Polo Grounds it will mean the end of Jacobs' stranglehold on New York's two biggest outdoor arenas. For years the Twentieth C. S. C. has held the exclusive right to promote fights at both ball parks.

Here is the way these organizations figure in the tangled heavyweight situation:

Louis' group received permission from the National Boxing Association to promote a 15-round bout in June between Negroes Ezzard Charles of Cincinnati and Jersey Joe Walcott of Camden, N. J., the winner to be recognized as NBA champion.

Solomons and Bill Daly, manager of Contender Lee Savold, closed a deal over the transatlantic telephone today for the Paterson, N. J., boxer to oppose the winner of the Mills-Bruce Woodcock bout in London, in August or September. The victor of the last match also will claim the world's championship.

Woodcock, the European and British Empire heavyweight champion, and Mills, world light-heavyweight king, are scheduled to meet in London, June 2.

The Tournament of Champions sent telegrams and cables to Charles, Savold, Walcott, Gus Lesnevich, the former 175-pound titleholder; Mills and Joe Baksi to participate in an elimination tournament under T. of C. promotion.

As for the Twentieth Century, Jacobs, in Miami Beach, said "I'm through with promoting, I guess it looks like I have to retire."

"I have already begun to work in my new capacity as director of boxing for the club," Louis wrote the NBA, after his announcement, "Our organization has obtained the signatures of Ezzard Charles and Jersey Joe Walcott on agreements to engage in a 15-round heavyweight contest this June."

"I'm glad to retire," he said, "it takes a great load off my mind. I could see that I couldn't fight any more and rather than lose the title in the ring, I decided to quit."

The Brown Bomber said his decision matured into a reality in the past 10 days.

Louis Thanks His Public, Says He Hated to Quit

Here is Joe Louis' statement to the public upon retiring as heavyweight champion:

"I have resigned my title.

"It meant so much to me, I really hated to do it.

"My new connection with Arthur M. Wirtz and James D. Norris keeps me in boxing, so this decision wasn't so hard as it might have been.

"There isn't a whole lot to say now except to thank all the fellows in the boxing game, press and photographers, the public and all the boxing commissions throughout the United States for the fine way they have treated me.

"My particular thanks go to Mike S. Jacobs and the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

"Uncle Mike has shown a deep interest in me throughout my whole fighting career and for that I can never thank him enough.

"I couldn't close without thanking John Roxborough, Julian Black and Marshall Miles, my managers, and Mannie Seamon, my trainer and all those who have been associated with me.

"I know my mother will be happy in my final decision.

(Signed) Joe Louis."

Joe Joins Gene Tunney, Jeffries in Stepping Out

New York, March 1 (AP).—By naming Ezzard Charles and Jersey Joe Walcott to battle it out for the "World's Championship," Joe Louis followed a precedent established by Big Jim Jeffries in 1905.

Louis, if he makes his retirement stick, will become the third heavyweight champion to retire undefeated. The others were Jeffries and Gene Tunney.

Jeffries, however, came back in 1910—five years after abdicating—and was knocked out in 15 rounds by Jack Johnson.

Jeffries stepped out as heavyweight king in 1905 because of lack of opposition. He named Marvin Hart and Jack Root as leading contenders and refereed a match between the two. Hart stopped Root in 12 rounds on July 3, 1905. Then Tommy Burns defeated Hart in 20 rounds on February 23, 1906, and naturally declared himself the champion.

Tunney knocked out Tom Heeney in 11 rounds, July 23, 1928, and a week later announced his retirement.

The championship was vacant for two years. Finally on July 12, 1930, Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey fought, and Schmeling by winning on a fourth-round foul, was universally accepted as the world's champion.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 1.—On different days they said it the same way, as if they had practiced it in chorus, "Lou Boudreau is a swell ballplayer, a terrific competitor, a tough guy in the clutch, and I guess the Cleveland fans like him, but . . ."

First it was Ed Robinson who said he was happy to get away from Boudreau and the Indians because "I couldn't hit it off with him." And today another of the anti-Boudreau bloc on the Nats checked in. He's pitcher Ed Klieman, also a refugee from the Indians, who said, "We didn't get along," and added a lot more.

POVICH

Thus it was apparently no long coincidence that both were traded off the Cleveland club. Boudreau's motives in making the Cleveland-Washington deal last December were seemingly two-pronged. He envisioned Mickey Vernon as a better first baseman than Robinson, and was eager to add Early Wynn to his pitching staff, but the deal also offered the opportunity to get rid of a pair of ballplayers for whom he had no personal liking, and vice versa.

In re Boudreau, Klieman is the most outspoken of the pair who came to Washington. He says it bluntly: "I don't like the guy."

KLIEMAN shares with Robinson the belief that the Indians will not win the pennant again, although it must be labeled as something of a wishful conviction. The pitcher says he has put himself on record, though. "In the banquet talks I made around Cleveland this winter, I said flatly that the Indians were very apt to wind up third behind Boston and the Yankees in 1949."

His troubles with Boudreau began as far back as 1944, after he had won 22 games and lost 11 for Baltimore. "It was at Boston, and I thought I was doing pretty well," said Klieman. "I had the Red Sox beat, 9-2 with two out in the ninth when Boudreau came to the mound and said I was through for the day.

"I still had a seven-run lead, and I thought Boudreau was acting panicky. I asked him to let me pitch to one more hitter. He blew up and cursed and said no. I said something else, and he slapped a $25 fine on me. That wasn't the end of it. We had words in the clubhouse and by degrees Boudreau kept upping the fine till it reached $200. Mel Harder finally talked it down to $100 again, for me."

FROM THAT point he was in Boudreau's doghouse, Klieman said. Never got to start another game in the next four seasons. "I didn't think I deserved that treatment. A manager shouldn't get sore if a pitcher wants to stay in there. He ought to be glad the pitcher has the desire instead of wanting out.

"That wasn't the worst of it, though," said Klieman. "As far as I was concerned, Boudreau delighted in giving me the works. I read a dozen times in the Cleveland papers last season that he wasn't starting me in ball games because he had no confidence in me. No guy wants to read that about himself, particularly when he has the second-best earned-run average in the league."

What he couldn't understand, said Klieman, was Boudreau's cracks about "no confidence in him." He said "the Indians used me in 44 games last season, so somebody must have had some confidence that I'd do all right. There was another guy on the Cleveland club who had the same complaint about Boudreau popping off."

KLIEMAN WAS referring to catcher Jim Hegan, he said. "Back in 1947, when Hegan was in a hitting slump, Boudreau told him not to bother about calling the pitches any more. He (Boudreau) would attend to that and take some worries off Hegan's shoulders that might help his hitting. That was all right as far as it went.

"But Boudreau then told the newspapermen that he was relieving Hegan of the catcher's job of calling the pitches. It got printed. It made Hogan look like a chump, and he was hopping mad, too. No guy likes to be told he can't be trusted to do his own thinking."

Why does Klieman think the Indians won't repeat their pennant triumph? "That's not hard to believe," he said. "Six guys on the Cleveland club had the greatest years of their lives, all in the same season in 1948, Boudreau, Keltner, Gordon, Lemon, Bearden and Mitchell. And then they barely won it. If one of 'em slumps this year, they don't figure to win any pennant."

Cameramen And Icy Wind Spoil Nats' 1st Workout

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla, Mar. 1.—Like a mischievous brat, Orlando was apparently saving up for this date, the day the Washington club opened spring training, and turned loose the coldest afternoon of the Florida winter.

To the embarrassment of the local Chamber of Commerce, the thermometer dipped below the 40s as a greeting to the heavy-jacketed squad of 25 Nats and their coaches who shuddered through a two-hour workout at Tinker Field.

It wasn't much of a workout. Photographers and television men superseded Manager Joe Kuhel in command for most of the morning and called the tune for the pitchers and catchers, with Kuhel standing indulgently by.

"We'll give 'em free reign today and get 'em off our necks starting tomorrow," said Kuhel of the cameramen in a burst of philosophy.

Eddie Bangs 'Em

When the squad did get down to a semblance of work, and a pair of batting practice pitchers were wheeled out to the mound, First Baseman Eddie Robinson, the acquisition from Cleveland, stole the hitting thunder.

He pumped two balls over the right field fence and whacked a half dozen more against the screen in right center. What Kuhel first saw of his heavy-legged, lefthanded first baseman, he liked.

The only other member of the squad whose batting eye was apparently not covered with rust was Jake Early. He drilled a dozen line drives into the outfield.

It was supposed to be an easy, first-day workout, and it was. The 16 pitchers attempted nothing more than soft lobs. Clark Griffith, surveying the scene bundled in his arctic overcoat, had one consolation, however. All of his players who were unsigned, except Shortstop Mark Christman, affixed their names to contracts late last night.

And Christman is no holdout problem, at least not yet. He isn't supposed to report until March 5 with the other infielders and outfielders, and until that date his holdout gestures are forgiven. He's battling against a cut in his $10,000 salary.

Champ Caps Home Tonight

With the Eastern division crown safely locked away, the Washington Caps come home to celebrate tonight in a Basketball Association of America clash with the St. Louis Bombers at Uline Arena at 8:45.

The occasion will be made special by halftime ceremonies and an unusual show, arranged by Bill Kavakos and featuring such entertainers as Rosanna, a Latin-American rumba queen, Singer Tommy Ryan, and the ballroom dance team of Montez and Adele.

The Caps, after downing the Chicago Stags by 67-57 to clinch the sectional title Monday, might be expected to suffer a let-down as they play out their schedule before the BAA championship playoff. But Coach Red Auerbach, from Rochester, N. Y., where the Caps played last night, insists the team will be kept on its toes in every game.

Louis Quits Ring, Joins Chicagoans As Promoter

Miami Beach, Fla., March 1 (U.P.).—Joe Louis officially vacated his heavyweight boxing championship today and then matched Ezzard Charles to meet Jersey Joe Walcott for the title in a sudden turnabout from his previous plans.

The Brown Bomber, already one of the sport's immortals, sprung his sudden announcement through National Boxing Association Commissioner Abe J. Greene in a series of letters which Greene read to a press conference.

"I have held the championship for a long time and I won it in the ring," Louis' statement said. "I expected to lose it the same way I won it. However, things have developed so that I think I ought to stick to the retirement announcement I made some time ago."

Then, on the heels of that, Greene read the Louis decision to go into the promotion business with Arthur M. Wirtz and James D. Norris, two Chicago associates. They will operate as the International Boxing Club with Louis the director.

Chicago Likely Scene

Louis said he has matched Charles, split decision victor last night over Joe Maxim, and Walcott, the man the Bomber twice defeated in championship fights, for the championship in June. The winner, Louis said, would meet either Lee Savold or Gus Lesnevich in a fall title bout. Sites of the proposed matches were not disclosed, but Chicago was considered likely since Norris owns the Chicago Stadium.

Greene said the NBA would "go along" with a title match between Charles and Walcott, but New York State Boxing Commission Chairman Eddie Eagan said he disapproved of a single fight for the vacated title. He preferred an elimination tournament.

Louis' announcement caught the boxing world by surprise. Although the champion had announced his retirement from the ring after his knockout victory over Walcott in June, he subse-

Mintz Denies Contract Signed

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 1 (U.P.).—Jake Mintz, manager of heavyweight contender, Ezzard Charles, said today that no contract has been signed for a subsequent shot at the title.

Mintz's statement denied an announcement made today by retiring Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, who said a new promotional organization of which he is a member had signed Charles and Walcott for a heavyweight elimination match.

Caps Defeated By Rochester

Rochester, N. Y., March 1.—Rochester's Royals extended their current streak to 9 straight and 22 in the last 24 here tonight, nipping the Washington Caps, 67-64, in the final game between these leaders before the playoffs.

The defeat meant little to Washington, which has already clinched the eastern title, but it was an important win for the Royals boosting their lead over Minneapolis to two full games.

A spirited drive by the Caps in the second half cut down Rochester's 10-point halftime lead, and Washington went ahead by a point for a moment in the fourth period, but the Royals regained the lead on two shots by Bill Calhoun and the teams played exactly even from that point.

The Caps were 6 points behind as the final session started, but quickly tied it up. After two minutes, two baskets by Kleggie Hermsen and one by McKinney made it 51-51. Hermsen's foul put the Caps ahead and the teams traded buckets the rest of the way.

Late in the game with Rochester ahead, 66-64, Bones McKinney missed a soft layup under the hoop and the Caps never regained possession.

Calhoun was Rochester's hero, scoring five buckets in six shots and holding Bob Feerick scoreless from the field. Arne Johnson and Jack Nichols paced the scorers with 14 points each.

American Wins, Catholic Loses In Mason-Dixon Openers

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The four top-seeded Mason-Dixon Conference basketball teams passed their first round tournament tests last night before a crowd of about 3500 at the Catholic University gym.

Hampden-Sydney, No. 1 team, edged Mount St. Mary's, 57-54. Loyola of Baltimore, No. 2, romped over Roanoke, 68-50. American U., No. 3, had its hottest hand of the season, routing Western Maryland, 84-60. And Bridgewater seeded fourth, upset Catholic, 69-54.

In tonight's semifinals, starting at 7:45, Hampden-Sydney meets Bridgewater, and American faces Loyola. Finals take place at CU gym Thursday night.

Mounts Lose, 57-54, To Hampden-Sydney

Top-seeded Hampden-Sydney turned back a last-minute Mount St. Mary's rally to win the opening game, 57-54.

The score was tied seven times in the tight game, but a seven-point rally gave the Tigers a 56-50 lead with a minute left.

A. U. Sets Records

Three Mason-Dixon Conference tournament scoring marks were broken and another tied as American University humiliated Western Maryland, 84-60.

American's 84 points were the most ever scored in a tourney game. The Eagles' 45 points in the second half were the most ever scored in a half. The combined point-total was the most ever made. And American's 33 field goals tied its previous record, set in 1945.

Loyola Ousts Roanoke

Roanoke College gave favored Loyola of Baltimore a stiff fight for one half, but the Greyhounds, led by Jim Lacy, pulled away after intermission to a 68-50 victory.

Lacy, off to a poor start, made only two of his first 19 field goals attempts. But in the last quarter, he connected on three out of seven, which together with his six fouls, gave him 16 points and scoring honors for the game.

Colonials Win Finale, 69-52

George Washington's Colonials closed out their regular season with a 69-52 Southern Conference victory over VMI last night at Eastern High's gym.

The victory was the eighth straight for GW and enabled George Garber's squad to compile a highly successful 16-7 mark for the season. In the conference, GW had a 10-4 record.

The winners were led by Maynard Haithcock's 16 points and runnersup were Bill Cantwell with 13 points; Johnny Moffatt with 12.

Next stop for GW is Durham, where the Southern Conference tourney gets under way Thursday.

25 Title Defenses

Louis' Earnings Top All at $3,887,323

New York, March 1 (AP).—Alabama-born Joe Louis held the world heavyweight championship longer than any other boxer in history and defended it oftener.

Louis won the title from James J. Braddock in Chicago, June 22, 1937. His official resignation today ended a reign of 11 years 8 months and 7 days.

The only comparable heavyweight reigns were those of John L. Sullivan, who held the title 10 years and 7 months, from February 7, 1882 to September 7, 1892, and of James J. Jeffries, who came out of retirement to fight Jack Johnson for the championship just over 11 years after he won it from Bob Fitzsimmons.

Jeffries, actually held the championship from June, 1899, until he retired because of lack of competition in March, 1905. Public opinion forced him to try a comeback five years later, after Johnson had won recognition as champion.

In other divisions, only Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane approached Louis' rule, holding the title 11 years, 3½ months, from 1912 to 1923.

When he knocked out Jersey Joe Walcott in the 11th round last June, Louis defended his title for the 25th time. Since Sullivan, who was accustomed to touring the country and meeting all comers, no heavyweight champion had made more than 16 title defenses. Tommy Burns reached that figure. Johnson defended the title 10 times and Jeffries 8.

Louis also was the youngest boxer ever to win the title. He was only 23 when he whipped Braddock while Sullivan, Jeffries and Jack Dempsey were 24 when they became champion. Fitzsimmons and Johnson both were 37 when they entered the ring for their last title bouts, so Joe is not the oldest heavyweight ruler.

Another respect in which Joe Louis tops them all is in ring earnings. Since he earned $50 for knocking out Jack Kracken in his first professional fight in 1934, the Brown Bomber earned $3,887,323.72 to the end of 1948, according to the The Ring record book. His exhibitions this winter have added an unknown amount to that total.

The same source gives Dempsey's ring earnings as $3,568,114 from 1919 to 1942, plus an estimated two million dollars from various sources, including refereeing boxing and wrestling bouts since then.

The financial high marks of Louis' career were the second meeting with Billy Conn, which drew $1,925,564, and the second Max Schmeling fight and his meeting with Max Baer, both of which went over the million-dollar mark in gate receipts.

Hoyas' O'Keefe Granted Another Year's Eligibility

William H. McCarter, chairman of the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, yesterday informed Georgetown's Tommy O'Keefe that he will be eligible to play basketball for the Hoyas next year.

The decision completely reversed a ruling by McCarter two weeks ago that O'Keefe could not play. O'Keefe, high-scorer for the past two seasons, attended Notre Dame as a freshman in 1945-1946. He was a member of the varsity squad but did not compete in any games. The ruling will allow him four full years of varsity competition at Georgetown.

Driskill Becomes Colt President

Baltimore, March 1 (AP).—Robert C. Embry resigned today as president of the Baltimore Colts in the All-America Football Conference. He immediately was named to the newly created post of vice chairman of the club's board of directors. He said he was forced to resign because of the press of other business.

His successor as president is Walter Driskill, former general manager who joined the Colts last season in their second year as a member of the conference. Driskill is also a former assistant coach under Jim Tatum at the University of Maryland.

Threatens Suit If He's Left Out

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Although he still is operating the municipal golf courses without a contract, Severine G. Leoffler, sr., yesterday announced the beginning of a drainage and improvement program that he said will cost more than $20,000.

Leoffler said he still hasn't received any official word from the Department of Interior about a new contract to replace the one that expired December 31.

"But I've been sure all along that the contract will be given to me. It has to be," Loeffler said.

Threatens Suit

"If it isn't," Leoffler stated, "the Government will have a law suit on its hands. The Department of Interior agreed to renew it and is morally bound to do so."

Loeffler received such a promise from C. Girard-Davidson, Assistant Secretary of Interior, when he advanced $59,000 for the construction of a clubhouse for the new Fort Dupont course.

Davidson has been out of town for a week and won't be back until Friday. Last word from him was that he was studying the controversial situation which developed when the Cleveland Concession Co. submitted a bid to operate the courses that Leoffler has supervised since 1921.

Drainage operations are underway at East Potomac Park where much of the course is under water. The soggy condition has resulted from the land settling about six feet since the fill originally was made.

Repairs Needed

The miniature golf course at East Potomac virtually must be rebuilt, and the estimated cost of that will be about $5000. Work on the Anacostia course will begin as soon as the District Sanitation Department permits the tapping of a storm sewer.

Leoffler said: "We can't sit tight. This work has to be done and it has to be done right now if the courses are to be in good playing shape for the spring."

Ray Alvis, local representative of the Cleveland Concession Co., which is trying to wrest the courses from Leoffler's control, took note of yesterday's announcement.

It's All Illegal

Said Alvis: "Leoffler has no contract and he has no authority to undertake such work. According to my attorneys, the Interior Department is letting him run the courses without due process of law.

"Leoffler never bid for renewal. We did and our proposition is a much better one than any he ever offered.

"It's as illegal as that business of Leoffler's advancing money for the Fort Dupont clubhouse. I have been assured that it's illegal to lend or advance money to the Government. And anyone foolish enough to do so, does it at his own risk."

Alvis added that his company demands that its bid be considered and will "fight this thing through."

Syracuse Fires Entire Football Staff

Baysinger, 5 Assistants Are Ousted

Syracuse, N. Y., March 1 (AP).—Syracuse University today dismissed its entire football coaching staff, headed by Reaves (Ribs) Baysinger.

The action stemmed from Syracuse's poor showing on the gridiron the last two seasons. The Orange won only three out of nine games in 1947 and only one out of nine last fall.

The coaches were discharged by the university administration board on recommendation of a trustee committee.

Relieved, besides Baysinger, were Lew Newton, Ralph (Chubb) Simmons, Bill Johnson, Bill Eschenfelder and Bill Simon.

One Kept for Boxing

Backfield Coach Roy Simmons also was relieved of his football duties but was retained as head coach of boxing and lacrosse.

The report announcing the dismissals was based on an investigation by a fact-finding committee of the board of trustees.

Lewis B. Andreas, director of athletics, who also serves as varsity basketball coach, received a vote of confidence from the board.

The report said the dismissal followed two unsuccessful football seasons under Baysinger. In 1947, the team won only three of nine games.

Baysinger May Stay

"No conflict need exist between high academic standing and successful football teams," the report claimed. "In fact, one contributes to the other."

Baysinger, a member of the University athletic department for 22 years, is under contract through February 1, 1950. The board said he would be paid for the balance of the contract. The board requested that "another position be found" for Baysinger in the university's system.

Blood Clots Hampering Hogan's Recovery

EL PASO, Tex., March 1 (AP).—"It will be a long, long time" before Ben Hogan, top money winning pro, can play golf again.

Hogan's doctors made that report today in amplifying an unexplained request to interviewers not to ask Hogan when he could play again.

The request came originally from Hogan's brother, Royal, of Fort Worth.

Hogan asked the reporters to thank many persons who have been "so nice about writing and wiring me."

At Hogan's request Dr. David Cameron told for the first time of blood clots which have given the golfer a rough time. But, said the doctor, now "we feel that he is on the road to recovery."

One of the clots appeared two weeks ago in Hogan's leg which had been crushed. It responded to treatment, but Dr. Cameron said there is another possibility of a blood clot there.

A small clot developed in his lung Sunday, but has disappeared.

Police Boys Benefit . . .

Post Pin Tourney Attracts More Than 10,000 Entries

Success of the third annual Washington Post Bowling Tournament for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club was assured as the big event, held on 27 area alleys, ended last night.

Although returns from the operators were unofficial, pending a complete check-up by Scorekeeper Julie Singer, manager of Greenway, the field of participants easily soared past the 10,000 mark, with expectations of reaching as high as 12,000.

All operators, floormen and members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Police Boys' Club who helped secure entries, staged an eleventh-hour drive to push The Washington Post tournament to the new heights it reached last night.

In some cases operators reported double the figure for any previous local big-time event. This was true in the case of Penn Recreation Center, managed by Lou Kramer, which was clutching the promised 1000 figure Monday, and last night, went past this in a breeze.

Chevy Chase Ice Palace also went over its 1000 quota by a good margin. Hi-Skor topped its mark for the event with approximately 900, while Manager Herbert McCarty, at Kalorama, who has been all but blasting the bowlers out of his alleys with nightly pleas for the tournament, reported well over 700. Columbia's Doc Gartrell expected his would exceed 500, while Brookland hoped to hit 750.

Bethesda Bowling Center, Fred Murphy at the helm, broke all records for this event with a possibility of hitting 600.

Last-minute scores include 328, 84—412 by Leonara Rose of the Ladies Country Club League, and 393, 87—470 by Joe Pellegrino of the St. Ann's League, both at Bethesda Bowling Center.

At Penn it was Stanley Love of Jewish War Veterans, 347, 105—452; Abe Roffeld, Plaza Sport Shop League, 408, 45J453, and Stu Burger, Plaza, 427, 42—469. All operators have been requested to turn in scores with entrance fee at once to Julie Singer at Greenway.

Metro Tourney Opens Tonight

The eight top high school basketball teams in Washington and vicinity open the annual Metropolitan Tournament tonight at 6 p. m. with four games at College Park.

In the first game, St. John's tied for the Catholic League championship, meets Washington-Lee, runnerup team in the Northern Virginia Group I League.

Top-seeded George Washington of Alexandria, the only undefeated team in the area, faces Woodrow Wilson, Interhigh runnerup in the second game at 7:30 p. m.

The Montgomery County champion, Montgomery Blair, hooks up with Gonzaga, tied for the Catholic title, in the third game at 9 p. m.

And in the windup of the program, Interhigh champion Central is paired against Hyattsville, Prince Georges County titlist, at 10:30 p. m.

Winners tonight qualify for the semifinals Friday night and finals are slated for next Monday night, both programs at College Park.

The George-Washington-Wilson and Gonzaga-Blair games are return engagements. G. W. licked Wilson twice before this season, and Gonzaga eked out three-point victories over Blair twice earlier in the year.

G. W. has a 20-0 record compared to 14-8 for Wilson. Gonzaga has 23-2 and Blair 16-5. St. John's, with 20-4, is favored over Washington-Lee, with 13-7. And Central, 15-7, is on the long end of odds against Hyattsville, 14-7.

Flyers Trounce Lions by 5-1

Four goals in 5½ minutes of the third period last night enabled the St. Louis Flyers to defeat the Washington Lions in an American Hockey League match on Uline ice, 5-1.

Paul Gladu, Ernie Trigg, Lloyd Doren and Billy McComb fired the conversions that tamed the Lions after the teams had deadlocked at the end of the second stanza 1-1.

Kentucky Accepts Bid To NCAA

New York, March 1 (AP).—Kentucky today accepted bids to both the NCAA basketball playoffs and the National Invitation Tournament.

Asa Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference and director of the Invitation tournament opening here March 12, said Kentucky had formally announced its decision to participate in the eight-team meet at Madison Square Garden.

Kentucky, which won the NCAA championship last year, also will represent the third district in the Eastern NCAA playoffs at Madison Square Garden March 21 and 22, Bushnell said.

Grand Slam Chance

The Wildcats, who furnished five players for the victorious United States team in the 1948 Olympics, thus became the first team in history with a chance to score a grand slam by taking both major postseason fixtures.

In 1944, Utah entered the Invitation tourney but was eliminated in the first round. The Utes then replaced Arkansas in the NCAA eliminations, after an automobile accident knocked Arkansas out of the running, and went on to take the NCAA title.

As the only other team ever to participate in both tourneys the same year, Utah met and defeated St. John's, winner of the 1944 invitation meet, in a charity game.

Billikens Play

Kentucky, with a record of 25 victories in 26 starts, is the second team to accept a bid to the Invitation tournament. The first was St. Louis University, only team to beat Kentucky this season. St. Louis accepted yesterday after losing for the second time to Oklahoma A. & M., thus missing a chance at the Missouri Valley Conference title and an NCAA bid.

With both Kentucky and St. Louis in the field, the Wildcats may have a chance to avenge their 42-40 defeat by the Billikens in the streamlined Sugar Bowl tournament at New Orleans.

The Invitation tournament will be scattered over an eight-day period, with play scheduled on the nights of March 12, 14, 17 and 19. St. Louis won the Invitation tourney last year.

Joe Louis Steps Down

quently said he would defend the crown again this June.

He had mentioned many possible contenders, but seemed to lean more to the winner of last night's Charles-Maxim fight in Cincinnati.

"Hated to Do It"

Following his announcements through Greene today, Louis, before leaving for an exhibition bout in Nassau, said, "I really hated to do it. It meant so much to me. But I can't take it back now."

He said he would return to Chicago March 18, but will continue exhibitions.

Louis offered particular thanks to Mike Jacobs, ailing, aging head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club which promoted Louis' fights anad built a powerful boxing dynasty in the process. "I can never thank him enough," Louis said.

Louis said he told Jacobs Sunday of his decision during a meeting at the promoter's Miami Beach home. Someone who was present said today that Jacobs put his arm around Louis' shoulders and said:

"Joe, I ain't got a kick coming. You were always great with me."

Blow to 20th Century

Actually, the 20th Century was absorbing a staggering blow, for Louis was its trump card in control of the sport.

Only yesterday the organization was set back when the Tournament of Champions, Inc., its principal New York rival, claimed it can obtain the Polo Grounds for a June fight, marking the first time in decades any group other than 20th Century could stage a major outdoor fight in New York.

Today the T. of C. gleefully followed up Louis' announcement by saying it will stage a heavyweight elimination tournament.

Japan's Role Is Outlined

had constructed at the end of the war 25 airfields with the capacity to dispatch B-29s, then our largest bombers, on 3500 missions a day.

"The whole of eastern Asia from Singapore to Vladivostok would lie within range of those machines."

When I asked him the function of Japan in the American strategy of defense, MacArthur said:

"We never intended to use Japan as an ally. All we want her to do is to remain neutral.

"We are helping her to become self-supporting because that will relieve us of the burden of supplying her.

"I believe that in three or four years she will be able to feed herself either by native production or by paying for imported food with exports."

Believes Interests Secure

MacArthur was confident that Anglo-Saxon interests in the Pacific were entirely secure despite the recent Communist victories in China and he was not worried about Communist gains in the recent Japanese elections. He said he did not think Japanese Communists had any direct link with Moscow.

But MacArthur said the strategy of the United States had been completely transformed by the war.

"Our defensive dispositions against Asiatic aggression used to be based on the West Coast of the American continent," he said.

"The Pacific was looked upon as the avenue of possible enemy approach. Now the Pacific has become an Anglo-Saxon lake and our line of defense runs through the chain of islands fringing the coast of Asia.

"It starts from the Philippines and continues through the Ryukyu archipelago, which includes its main bastion, Okinawa. Then it bends back through Japan and the Aleutian island chain to Alaska.

"Though the advance of the Red armies in China places them on the flank of that position, this does not alter the fact that our only possible adversary on the Asiatic continent does not possess an industrial base near enough to supply an amphibious attacking force.

"War industries in Russia are in the region of the Ural Mountains, from which their output, I believe, of weapons and munitions would have to be hauled over 4000 miles of mainly single-track railroad to Vladivostok."

Regarding the suggestion that Japan should be "allowed" to raise a home defense army, the supreme commander said:

"That is a premature proposal. It is a matter that could be decided only when a peace treaty with Japan is drafted. Till then the Army of Occupation will remain there, not to hold down Japan—that is unnecessary—but owing to the unfortunate split between powers that were allies during the war.

"Japan has become an outpost which we are entitled to occupy in defense of Anglo-American interests."

MacArthur said that if Japan ever were attacked it would be easy to raise an army to "cooperate with us."

"The Japanese are about the stubbornest infantry soldiers in the world," he said.

Believes Them Grateful

The general believes the Japanese are grateful for the new social ideas and greater freedom the Allied occupation has brought them.

"Labor used to be ruthlessly exploited here," MacArthur said. "Wages were only a couple of jumps ahead of starvation. We have given the Japanese workers trade unions, an eight-hour day, the right to collective bargaining and other advantages. I fully expect to see a labor party come into existence in Japan."

"How is it you have no trouble with the Russians whereas they interfere so much with the Allied occupation forces in Germany?" I asked.

"Perhaps because the Russian mentality is as Oriental as it was in the days of Genghis Khan," MacArthur said. "And I have had 50 years' experience dealing with Orientals."

How Does American Business Pay the World's Highest Wages

and Sell at the World's Lowest Prices?

ALMOST 60 million people are working today in these United States at the highest wages in the world.

The U.S. worker receives twice the wages of the Swiss worker, twice to two-and-a-half times those of the British worker, from four to five times the French and Italian worker, seven to eight times the German worker and at least ten times the wages of the Russian worker—those Russians who get paid at all.

How then—with what remains—can American business produce automobiles, refrigerators, freight cars, tractors, combines, mining and oil-drilling equipment—all heavy goods and most light goods at the world's lowest unit prices?

Some call it the result of "mass production" and "mass consumption" and let it go at that. Some say it's a natural outgrowth of Free Enterprise and the incentive generated by the Profit System. Some—despite this record the whole world envies—decry and condemn the very system that made it possible, harping "big profits" and "profiteering" as their time-worn theme.

Let's take these answers for what they are—and let's do a little comparing for the record.

The ultimate answer to this productive capacity and wage earning ability is that every American worker is backed by a capital investment twice to ten times that of his counterpart in other countries.

For every man at work in the automobile industry, there is from 6 to 8 thousand dollars invested to give him the equipment to shorten his hours of labor.

Business in other nations does not, cannot back its workers with such modern machines and methods. That is why their automobiles, for example, the few they build, cost 50 to 100 per cent more than yours for comparable quality.

How can American business go on and on providing this capital?

The answer is profits... profits... and again profits!

But for the promise of profits, there would be no business. There would be no incentive to risk capital—no way to plan for expansion and growth and progress.

The dream of profit is present at the birth of every new idea—so that greater progress may follow. It is the incentive toward technological improvement—so that the costly development may ultimately be put at the disposal of millions. The hope of reward is the driving force of venture and enterprise. And the only case where profits may be considered unreasonable is when they yield more than the amounts needed to support adequate incentives for production and growth.

Who is to say when this country shall stop growing? Who is to dictate how fast and how far our people shall progress? And who is to condemn, and get away with it, a Business System that pays the world's highest wages and sells at the world's lowest prices?

Big profits they say? Let's not forget it's a two-way street. In the 5 years following 1929—129,679 businesses failed in this country. They would not have failed if they had earned and retained sufficiently high profits to weather the storms of recession—and keep men at their jobs.

So it isn't a Profit System at all. It's a Profit and Loss System.

And next time anyone gives you this loose talk about "big profits," give them this honest answer:

"I've got my job and my job-security because of profits. I've got my home and everything in it because of profits. And if we're going to carry out our plans for giving billions to less fortunate nations—if we're going to spend billions for armaments just in case—and keep ourselves growing and progressing and prospering—we had better encourage business to make more profit and put an end to this nonsense!"

This is No. 2 of a series of advertisements being published by the Standard Steel Spring Company of Coraopolis, Pennsylvania, as a contribution to a better understanding of America's greatness.

Back in 1914, a small group of men organized a small business in Coraopolis, Pennsylvania, for the manufacture of buggy and wagon springs. That was before the dream of a nation on wheels took shape. In the period that has followed there have been good years and bad years. There have been two wars. But through these years, this business, like many another, has progressed and grown strong because it has been free to grow. And because its management has had the courage and vision to plow earnings and profits back into the business.

Teachers Get New Hopes For $330 Pay Boost Here

Davis Measure Proposes Same Increase Set for Firemen and Police

Prospects of boosting District teachers' pay raises from $200 to $330, looked brighter on Capitol Hill yesterday.

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), member of both the House District and Civil Service Committees, introduced a bill calling for a $330 retroactive pay boost for teachers as well as policemen ad firemen.

An earlier decision by the fiscal group and two other House District Subcommittees, those in charge of educational and police matters, had set the teachers' pay raise at $200, while policemen and firemen would get $330, all retroactive to last July, when Federal workers won the $330 hike.

Representative Davis, who had originally called for joint consideration of the three groups of city employes, indicated that introduction of his new bill represented a weakening of opposition to the higher teacher pay raise figure.

After the tentative decision to hold teacher pay raises to a flat $200, Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of District schools, made strong appeals to House District leaders for the higher pay boost.

Representative Davis said he would ask the full House District Committee to consider his new teacher, police and firemen pay bill at its Monday meeting. "I am most optimistic for favorable action by the full group," Davis commented.

In other District pay legislation actions, the House Civil Service Pay Subcommittee yesterday failed to complete work on the top executive pay bill which also carries a $330 pay hike for District classified workers, and Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N.Y.) introduced a bill which would give all Federal and District employes an $1100 annual increase.

Army Wife, Two Children Die in Fire

Infant Boy Saved As Soldier Pulls Crib From Cabin Near Fort Belvoir

An Army wife and her two tiny children were burned to death yesterday when flames leveled their two-room tourist cabin near Fort Belvoir, Va.

The dead were Mrs. Agnes Ottens, 23, wife of Army Corpl. Edward B. Ottens, and their two children, Melody Anne, 2½, and Donald Edward, 1½. Ottens is stationed at Fort Belvoir.

Saved, but in critical condition at Walter Reed Hospital was their third child, Terry Michael, three months. He was pulled from the blazing cabin by Army Corpl. Hal Tipton, who lives in an adjoining cabin.

Flames first were noticed shortly before 8 a. m. by John Lee, a handyman about the Pine Air Cabins, where the tragedy occurred.

Door Forced Open

Lee called Corporal Tipton as the latter was crossing U. S. Route 1 in front of the cabins.

Tipton, stationed with the 801st Engineers at Fort Belvoir, said he "saw the smoke rising from the cabin and ran down there. The whole inside of the cabin was a mass of flames."

He said he then tried to open the door, "but the baby's bassinet was jammed against it with some boxes on the other side."

Finally forcing the door open, "I pulled the crib out and the baby with it and put them off to one side. Then I tried to get back in. The woman (Mrs. Ottens) was lying on a couch near the door, but I couldn't get to her—I got to within three or four feet of her but the flames were too hot."

Fanned by High Wind

Meantime, a pump engine from the Occoquan-Woodbridge-Lorton Volunteer Fire Department had been summoned, with Chief R. W. Hall in command. The equipment arrived about 8:10, Hall said. Seeing the blaze, Hall promptly sent for another engine.

Hall said the fire, fanned by a high wind, threatened an adjoining cabin 10 feet away before firemen saved it with their hoses.

With their pumper tanks—the only sources of water—running dry, Hall decided to call in other fire companies. Mrs. Michael Resetar, who operates the cabins with her husband, tried to get the phone operator on their party line.

Failing, she had a neighbor drive her nearly 10 miles to the Groveton State police substation, where she turned in the second alarm. Chief Hall, meanwhile, had also gotten in touch with the Penn Daw department.

In addition to the Occoquan and Penn Daw departments, units from Fort Belvoir, Franconia, Mount Vernon and Alexandria fought the blaze.

When it finally subsided about 11 a. m., firemen removed the charred bodies of Mrs. Ottens and her two children.

Hall said both children were in the one bedroom, the mother in the living room. The husband, an assistant instructor at the Fort Belvoir engineer school, had left for work about 15 minutes before the flames broke out. Chief Hall said the fire may have started in the kerosene heating stove.

He pointed to two drums of kerosene supplying the stoves fastened to the walls of each cabin, and to the kerosene overflow soaking the ground about the units.

All but one section of the back wall of the tiny cabin was leveled by the fire. Personal possessions lay in a charred heap about the structure. Among the remains were burned, water-soaked remnants of picture albums with family snapshots.

The Pine Air Cabins are located on United States Route 1 about 14 miles south of Alexandria, 4 miles south of Fort Belvoir, and near the turnoff for Gunston Hall.

Bodies of Mrs. Ottens and her two children were taken to Hall's funeral home in Occoquan. No funeral arrangements had been made late yesterday.

At Fort Belvoir, officials said Corporal Ottens has been in the Army for seven years.

Mercury to Hit 15 in Area; Gales Cause Power Failures

WIND-BLOWN TELEPHONE POLE—Here's a job for trouble-shooters. March's lionlike blasts yesterday kept telephone lines humming like a zither and pushed over many poles. This is a scene on Telegraph rd. (Highway 611), south of Alexandria, Va.

An early morning freeze that may send the temperature down to 20 in the city and 15 in the suburbs is expected today on the heels of yesterday's buffeting winds.

Winds that averaged 30 miles an hour and rose to a gale force of 31 miles an hour at 1:03 p. m. yesterday caused numerous power failures in the area.

Charles A. Riddle, 49, a teacher at George Washington High School, narrowly escaped serious injury during a weird rush hour, wind-caused accident yesterday when a 12-foot pointed plank sailed through his windshield and landed against his steering wheel.

The accident occurred on Highway Bridge when wind caused the lumber, 12 to 16 feet in length, being carried on a truck driven by Leroy Elliot, 21, 1338 W st. nw., to break its tiedowns. Riddle's face was cut in about 15 places by windshield glass shattered by the plank.

Another plank dented the roof of another car driven by James D. Sellner, 6631 Eastern ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Potomac Electric Power Co. officials reported a power line failure over the Cabin John streetcar bridge, just east of Foxhall rd., caused by a falling tree limb.

Although the damaged lines were out from 12:03 p. m. to 2:10 p. m., streetcars feeding off them were quickly switched to an alternate source and no traffic delay was reported, the company said.

Forecasters expect a considerable slackening in the wind today. Clear skies and a high of 40 were also predicted for the District.

With no definite break in the cold snap predicted for the next several days, Virginia and Maryland fruit growers continue to fear serious damage to peach crops.

Horticulturists at Hancock, center of western Maryland's $400,000 peach crop, saw the budding crop endangered by temperature predictions of 10 degrees, the critical temperature for peaches. One official there said the buds would be destroyed if the temperature went down to 5 degrees.

Holober Acts Out Killing Of Wife at Death Scene

Unmoved Slayer Demonstrates Crime At Nudist Camp For Fairfax Police

Charles Francis Holober yesterday acted out for benefit of police the grim tragedy at the spot where he shot his wife to death and buried alive his infant daughter.

Fairfax County police took the 40-year-old confessed killer to the site of the Green Forest nudist camp yesterday morning.

While Detective Sergt. Joseph Howard stooped in the position in which Mrs. Frances Holober, 37, had been when she was shot to death, Holober took a stance with a toy pistol and demonstrated how he had fire a shot into the back of his wife's head.

Handcuffed to Officer

Holober remained handcuffed to Detective Sergt. Cecil E. Brown during the demonstration.

The police officers said Holober went to the scene willingly and did not seem to be affected by the reconstruction of the crime.

He casually pointed out the shallow grave in which he had buried the body of his wife and still living daughter, June, 8 months, last Thursday.

"Did you scrape the blood off the ground after you shot your wife?" asked one detective.

"No," said Holober, "I just turned over the sod."

To police, Holober pointed out where his car had become mired in mud, where he had hidden the shovel and mattock used in digging the grave and where he had parked the car near the camp before the murders.

Dragged Body to Grave

He showed how he had buried the cartridge shells ejected from his automatic by pushing them down into the ground with his thumb.

He explained that he had dragged his wife's body 22 feet from where he shot her to the grave he had prepared.

While police were reconstructing the crime, 12 persons stopped to take a curious peek at the murder scene which is a mile from the nearest house.

Holober was asked by a reporter if he had enjoyed his breakfast at the Fairfax County Jail.

"It was very good," he replied. "I told Mr. Low about it."

Low is custodian of the jail.

About 45 minutes were spent at the scene, after which Holober was returned to his jail cell. Shortly after noon, he was visited by two men, described by police officials as his attorneys. The men remained with Holober about an hour. When they left they refused to tell reporters their names and would not discuss the case.

Holober, who lived with his parents at 1216 Shepherd st. nw., requested permission to attend funeral services for his wife and daughter yesterday, but police refused.

Change in Use Of Park View School Urged

Proposed as Center For Handicapped Negro Children

Park View Elementary School, Warder and Newton sts. nw., would become a center for physically-handicapped Negro school children under a proposal made to the Board of Education yesterday.

Schools Supt. Hobart M. Corning recommended that the building, now used as a white elementary school, be transferred to Negro children. The transfer, to be made effective next September, was approved yesterday by the board's building and grounds committee and will go before the full board at its meeting at 3:30 p. m. today.

Corning said sight-saving and hard-of-hearing classes now conducted at the Douglass-Simmons School and crippled children's classes at Anthony Bowen School would be moved into the new center.

The 26-room Park View School, he said, also would be used to relieve overcrowding at two Negro elementary schools—the Bruce School where classes average 40 pupils, and the Monroe School where classes have 42 pupils.

It would provide temporary relief for Banneker Junior High School also until an annex there is built, he added.

Park View currently has five regular classes with an enrollment of 128 students and occupational classes for 57 other children. These students can be housed satisfactorily at Raymond School, 10th and Spring rd. nw., and Petworth School, 8th and Shepherd sts. nw., Corning said.

The school superintendent said he has not decided what use shall be made of Blow and Webb Elementary Schools after they are vacated at the end of the school year as annexes to Browne Junior High School.

Board Member Adelbert W. Lee asked Corning to look into the possibility of their use to house Negro elementary school children as an alternative to the construction of an annex to the Young Elementary School, 24th st. and Benning rd. ne.

The committee also recommended that four white elementary schools scheduled for replacement be rehabilitated instead. The schools are Edmonds, Maury, Peabody and Hyde.

D. C. Self-Rule Bill Decision Due Thursday

The Senate District Home Rule Subcommittee will meet Thursday at 2 p. m. to decide what type of Washington self-rule measure it will draft.

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) and his group—Senators Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) and Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.)—will choose between two broad home-rule plans:

1. A simple bill to provide for an elected city manager and an elected 12-member council, or

2. A measure calling for both elected city officials and a sweeping reorganization and regrouping of District government departments similar to the Auchincloss bill.

The city's suffrage leaders have clearly indicated that either approach is perfectly acceptable to them.

Senator Kefauver said his subcommittee would start drafting a bill for introduction to the Senate immediately after Thursday's meeting.

Montgomery Personnel Board Headed by Sims

Lewis B. Sims of Chevy Chase was unanimously elected chairman of the Montgomery County personnel board at its first meeting yesterday held immediately after swearing-in ceremonies in the Rockville Courthouse.

Other members of the new board, which will meet Saturday mornings at 10 a. m. for an indefinite period, are Mrs. Edith A. Dinwoodey, also of Chevy Chase, and Malcolm H. White of Sunshine, Md.

Vacancy Filled

Police Dept. Announces 3 Promotions

Three promotions and swearing in of four motorcycle policemen were announced yesterday by the Metropolitan Police Department.

Precinct Detective Clarence Winemiller of First Precinct was promoted to detective sergeant and assigned to the General Assignment Squad. The vacancy was created February 1 by retirement of Detective-Sergt. Clyde Rouse.

Others promoted include: Michael J. Aperti, formerly probationary detective with the Sex Squad, to precinct detective; Pvt. Maurice Casem, Special Investigation Squad, to probationary detective.

Pvts. W. L. Weisbacker, Ninth Precinct, and L. A. Pinner, Sixth Precinct, and Pvts. S. E. Wallace, Fourth Precinct, and J. F. Pergel, Thirteenth Precinct, have been sworn in as motorcycle men.

3 Get Year On Road Gang In Theft Series

Three men convicted of stealing nearly $1000 worth of plumbing and auto supplies were sentenced yesterday to serve a year on the Virginia road gang.

The stiff sentences, the maximum allowed in Arlington County Court, were handed down by Trial Justice Hugh Reid, who remarked that the men's records were "too bad for me to consider suspending the sentences."

Sentenced were William A. Dodd, jr., 20, of 2121 Military rd., Arlington; Walter James Curtis, 19, of Kirby rd., Fairfax, and Harold Schweitzer, 20, of Route 1, Fairfax.

All pleaded guilty January 25 to petty larceny after the original charge of grand larceny had been reduced with the consent of the Commonwealth Attorney's office.

Police said the plumbing and auto equipment was stolen over the past several months from parked cars and new construction jobs.

600 Legionnaires Due At Rehabilitation Talks

More than 600 department and post rehabilitation workers are expected to attend the twenty-sixth annual rehabilitation conference of the American Legion which opens today at the Statler Hotel.

Group Indorses Reappointment as D. C. Commissioner

The Metropolis View Citizens Association last night indorsed reappointment of Commissioner John Russell Young to the District Board of Commissioners, "if he wishes to continue" after his current term expires May 17.

Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, president of the association, which met at the Crosby Noyes School, 10th and Franklin sts. ne., said the members unanimously indorsed the motion as presented by Sabiour Sidotti, association treasurer.

"If the Commissioner does not wish to return to office, we would prefer a younger or more vigorous man in the office," she added. "We feel the job of Commissioner requires a stout constitution, and the days are past when it's an honorary job."

In other actions, members favored the proposed $330 cost-of-living increase for District employes, retroactive to July 1, 1948. The group also went on record as approving retention of District playgrounds within the authority of the District Recreation Department, rather than transferring them to the Department of Interior, as has been proposed.

MacArthur Boulevard

The MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association went on record unanimously in favor of home rule for the District at its meeting last night. The association also voted approval of the proposed raise in teachers' pay.

The 23 members attending the meeting at Palisades Field House, Dana and Sherrier pl. nw., heard Sturgis Warner of the Washington Home Rule Committee outline the various home rule proposals now being considered.

Carver Civic

The Carver Civic Association last night organized a membership drive and laid plans to reward owners of the best-kept lawns in the community at a meeting in the home of the group's president, the Rev. John E. Morris, 2324 15th pl. se.

4 Labor Leaders And Tobin Back Red Cross Drive

Labor Secretary Maurice J. Tobin yesterday joined four top labor leaders in support of the 60-million-dollar Red Cross fund appeal throughout the Nation.

"The Red Cross has long been an important part of our everyday life," Tobin said. "It has given the American people confidence because we know its services are always ready and available when trouble strikes," he continued, urging citizens to contribute.

Labor leaders who added their voices in praise of the American Red Cross are Philip Murray, CIO president; William Green, AFL president; Willard S. Townsend, president of United Transport Service Employes, and George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks.

Underwriters Of Inaugural Will Not Lose

Subscribers to the Inaugural guarantee fund of $258,405 will be repaid in full, Melvin D. Hildreth, committee chairman, announced yesterday.

Repayment to 500 individuals and firms underwriting the cost of the event was made possible by the "tremendous success of the 41st Inaugural," Hildreth stated.

Meanwhile, Hildreth revealed the Bureau of Internal Revenue has under consideration a request that Inaugural tickets be exempted from the Federal amusement tax.

Proceeds of a tax exemption, if allowed by the Internal Revenue Bureau, would be directed as charity contributions to such institutions as Children's Hospital, Florence Crittenton Home, the Community Chest, Police Boys' Club, etc., he said.

Gallinger Opens Admitting Office

Gallinger Hospital yesterday opened its new $50,000 central admitting office with improved facilities to check and clear new patients. Previously new patients were routed through crowded examining rooms.

The new office operates on a 14-hour day Monday through Sunday, with investigating social workers on duty during these hours to check new patients' eligibility. Investigation workers previously were on duty 8 hours a day, five days a week.

D. C. Welfare Outlay Rose In January

Public assistance extended during January to the aged, blind, dependent children and families by the District Board of Public Welfare showed an increase in all categories over the previous month.

The board's January report showed $108,423 paid out in old age assistance; $133,349 for aid to dependent children; $10,040 to aid the blind; $6109 to families on general public assistance and $53,466 to single persons on general public assistance.

This represented a 7 per cent increase on the family category and 2.2 per cent rise on the aid to dependent children and smaller boasts in the other services. Compared to the same month a year ago, the family figure represents a 6.9 per cent drop, however.

Map Service Employe Found Dead in Home

Robert B. Roark, 61, an Army Map Service employe, was found dead, apparently of natural causes, last night in his home at 39 Valley rd., Cabin John, Md., Montgomery County Police at Bethesda reported.

Detective Sergt. John Leahy of the Bethesda substation said Roark was found in his home, with the lights on and the radio playing, about 8 p. m.

Man, 46, Drowns In Potomac After Fall from Dredge

William D. Fitzgerald, 46, was drowned in the Potomac River yesterday after a fall from a dredge near the Virginia shore 3 to 4 miles south of Alexandria.

Fitzgerald, who lived and worked aboard the dredge owned by the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co., was apparently caught off balance and toppled into the river, according to Fairfax County police. Efforts to revive him after the body was recovered a short time later were unsuccessful.

Dr. Nelson Podolnick, Fairfax County coroner, ruled the case "accidental death by drowning."

Ransom's Disappearance Due To Amnesia, Physician Says

Leon A. Ransom was suffering from temporary amnesia caused by nervous exhaustion when he disappeared from Washington Thursday to Sunday, his physician said yesterday.

After he returned to Washington yesterday, Ransom, a prominent 49-year-old attorney, said he had been "very worried about the large volume of work he had to do," the family physician, Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, reported.

Ransom is chairman of the Committee for Racial Democracy and former acting dean of Howard University Law School. Active in court fights against discrimination, he has been subject to chronic illness and long has needed a rest, according to his wife.

From Friday afternoon until Sunday night, Ransom stayed at the Union, N. J., home of an old friend, Dr. N. J. Watts, a dentist, while a search for him was pressed by Washington police.

Sunday night Dr. Watts noticed a newspaper account of Ransom's disappearance. The dentist phoned Mrs. Ransom here and the search was called off.

Still unexplained was the whereabouts of Ransom from Thursday noon when he left Municipal Court and failed to show up at his office, and Friday afternoon, when he appeared at Dr. Watts' home.

Ransom yesterday could not remember what he did after leaving court Thursday but recalled suddenly finding himself on a train bound for Union, N. J., Dr. Marshall said.

Ransom returned home about 3 a. m. yesterday, accompanied by his son, Leon A. Ransom, jr., 19-year-old student at Catholic University.

Olmsted Restaurant Employes Vote Heavily for Union Shop

Eligible employes of Olmsted Restaurant, 1336 G st., have voted overwhelmingly for a union shop, the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board announced yesterday.

Of 36 eligible voters, 30 cast ballots for a union shop under the local joint executive board of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders International Union (AFL). No votes were cast against the union shop and one vote was challenged.

Union action ousting William S. Johnson, business agent of Local 209, Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Kitchen Helpers Union, who refused to sign an anti-Communist oath required by the Taft-Hartley Act, paved the way for the election.

Another election—also held up during the dispute over the affidavit—will be held March 28 at Fan & Bill's, 1132 Connecticut ave. nw.

Jailed in Panty Theft

Stealing 11 pairs of panties sent Diana Thomas, 19, no known address, to jail yesterday for the next two months. According to Municipal Court charges, she shoplifted the garments last November from the G. C. Murphy Co.

Court Rules Joint Residence Bars Desertion Divorce Plea

As long as husband and wife continue to live under one roof, although estranged, neither of them can count time so spent toward a divorce on the grounds of two years' desertion in Washington.

That was the ruling yesterday of Judge Edward A. Tamm, in what was described as the first reported decision of its type in District Court. The judge said he was refusing to extend the doctrine in force here that parties living in the same house, but not as man and wife, can get divorces for five years' voluntary separation.

On this reasoning, William T. Speer, 53, 4822 Illinois ave. nw., a senior auditor for the Bureau of Internal Revenue here, was refused a decree. He claimed that his wife walked out on him in 1944, but Judge Tamm found that, although estranged, they didn't reside in separate residences until July 5, 1946. Speer filed his divorce action in July, 1947, and could not legally claim two years' desertion therefor, the judge ruled.

However, the wife, Mrs. Elsie K. Speer, 50, 701 Decatur st. nw., got an absolute divorce on the ground that her husband ousted her on the July 5 date. She was able to show two years' constructive desertion because her suit was filed exactly two years later, July 5, 1948.

The decree gave her title to Speer's $14,000 home and a $5000 life insurance policy of his. Her attorneys are Lewis B. Shapiro and Whitford W. Cheston.

There is one son, William T. Speer, jr., who is married and nearly 21 years of age.

Area News in Brief

Government Seeks Foggy Bottom Site

The Federal Government took a new interest in Washington's Foggy Bottom yesterday following a District order Monday rezoning the area as residential.

W. E. Reynolds, public buildings commisioner, warned the House Public Works Committee yesterday that Uncle Sam may lose out on a good bargain if it does not get congressional authority to buy there soon.

Land developers are taking a real interest in Foggy Bottom since the way is now cleared for the possible erection of eight-story apartment buildings, Reynolds declared.

He was testifyng on a site acquisition bill which would permit the Federal Works Agency to acquire a four-block section just south of the intersection of Virginia and New Hampshire aves. nw. for a Government building to be erected in the future.

Reynolds emphasized that FWA has no specific plans for a new Federal building.

He merely wanted authority, he said, to purchase the site to forestall any private improvement ventures which would raise the purchase price substantially.

Washington "is similar to Miami Beach," said Reynolds, in that land values steadily increase, even in depressions.

2000 Snakes Donated

The Smithsonian Institution proudly announced yesterday it is richer by 2000 burrowing snakes.

The collection, largest known aggregation of burrowing snakes of the Southwest, was presented by Miss Edith R. Force, a Tulsa school teacher who has made a life hobby of studying the obscure reptiles.

Pencil-sized, burrowing snakes are sandy colored and nonpoisonous. They spend their lives buried in sand or under piles of debris.

False Claim Charged

According to Assistant United States Attorney Joseph Sommer in Municipal Court, more than $558 is involved.

He said Reed, a former railroad brakeman, claimed 31 weeks compensation after he was furloughed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and that during the period, he was working as a truck driver.

The case was continued until March 22 after the court was told that full restitution will be made.

Ohio Wesleyan U. President Given Personnel Award

Arthur S. Flemming, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, and former United States Civil Service Commissioner, last night received the Warner W. Stockberger achievement award.

Presentation was made by the Society for Personnel Administration in the Agriculture Department's South Building.

Flemming, Civil Service Commissioner from July, 1939, to August, 1948, and a member of the Hoover Commission, received the award "for outstanding leadership in adapting Federal personnel administration to the critical needs of the country during the recent war and postwar period."

Presentation was made by E. R. Ballinger, assistant to the Comptroller General. The award memorializes the late Dr. Warner W. Stockberger, pioneer in the field of personnel administration.

Nutting Bequests To Cathedral, Church Upheld

In a will contest case, Judge F. Dickinson Letts ruled yesterday that the Washington Cathedral and the Nativity Episcopal Church may share in the $118,000 estate of the late Mrs. Lillian L. Nutting.

The District Court jurist upheld the bequests to the religious institutions in Mrs. Nutting's will, despite the fact that the will was made just 12 days before her death on July 26, 1947. He held inapplicable a provision of the District code that bequests to religious organizations or to clergymen are invalid unless the will making the gifts is executed at least a month before the death of the testator.

Because of three prior wills, said the judge, the code provision is inapplicable since Mrs. Nutting meant her last will to affirm the prior pertinent bequests rather than to revoke them.

The widow of Dr. Hugh Nutting made a number of bequests to cousins and friends and expressly eliminated other relatives, saying they were comparative "strangers" or else were not in need. Most of her 13 cousins contested the will.

One-third of the remainder of her fortune went to the cathedral, and one-sixth to the Nativity church. Another third went to the Masonic and Eastern Star Home and a sixth to the Home for Incurables.

Clark Elected Venerable Master Of Mithras Lodge

Omer W. Clark, 3357 Stutyvesant pl. nw., last night was elected venerable master of Mithras Lodge of Perfection, the governing lodge of the four coordinate bodies of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonary for the Valley of Washington, at the annual meeting in the Temple, 2800 16th st. nw.

Mr. Wagner, who left the District five years ago, was in business here until 1939 with his brother, John Wagner, with whom he owned the Capitol Printing Co.

In 1935 he married Miss Mae Barber of Westfield, Mass.

Services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Marshall Back On Army List

Gen. George C. Marshall, former Secretary of State, has been restored to the active list, the Army announced yesterday.

The restoration, the Army said, does not give General Marshall any active duty assignment or make any changes in his pay and allowances.

General Marshall was voluntarily placed on the retired list to accept appointment as Secretary of State.

The law that created the special five-star rank exempted generals and admirals from mandatory retirement because of age. They receive their full pay and allowances for life whether carried on the active or on the retired list.

Mrs. Holober's Funeral Rites Attended by Crowd of 130

Funeral services for Mrs. Frances Garner Holober, 37, and her 8-month-old daughter, June, were attended by 130 persons yesterday at the Goldberg Funeral Home, 4217 Ninth st. nw.

Before the ceremonies began at 1 p. m., crowds of the curious had filed by the open casket to see the body of Mrs. Holober, with her daughter clasped in her arms.

Irving Garner, father of the dead woman, was the only member of her immediate family to attend the rites. No members of the Holober family were present.

Garner, visibly shaken, took a last look at his daughter's body before the casket was closed, and cried out, "My baby, my baby!" He was accompanied to the funeral by Mrs. Edward Kauffman, a sister.

The services were conducted by Rabbi Henry Segal of the B'Nai Israel Congregation, 14th and Emerson sts. nw.

Rabbi Segal explained that while Mrs. Holober was not a member of his congregation, several persons in her family were members.

Rabbi Segal read the Twenty-third Psalm in Hebrew, and then recited it in English with the mourners.

In his opening prayer, he praised God "for the years thou hast granted to" Mrs. Holober "in which she brought as much happiness as it was in her power to bring to friends and relatives around her."

In later remarks, he spoke of Mrs. Holober as a woman "born and raised in circumstances in which she could not do what others can do."

"We sometimes hear at such occasions words of eulogy for those who did much with what they possessed," he said.

"Here we can pay tribute to her who didn't have much to give . . . who didn't have earthly goods to give. But she gave herself.

"This can be said here. She gave herself completely. All her life she submerged her own hopes for fulfillment in her interests in the life of her closest and dearest ones . . .

"Here it can be said she died climbing, always hoping to find personal happiness through giving happiness to those who were near her. Her great yearning was for motherhood. At least she saw that fulfillment.

"The question as to why such tragedies happen can never be answered. We live in a world in which we have seen in our own time tragedies visited upon the millions . . . The good have always suffered because of the evildoers."

He enjoined God to "bind the wounds that have been inflicted and give members of the family solace and comfort and to her and her child everlasting peace."

At graveside services at the B'nai Israel Cemetery in Oxon Hill, Rabbi Segal was joined by Sexton K. Goldman in rites for the dead. Sexton read with Garner the memorial prayer for members of the family of the deceased.

J. B. Early, Southern Ry. Officer, Dies

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Cora L. Nixon, and a sister, Mrs. Nora Simmons, both of whom live at 308 Eastern ave. ne.

Mrs. Tansill Dies; Mother Of Professors

Mrs. May Callan Tansill, 90, widow of Charles F. Tansill, former chief of the Pensions Office records section, and early Brookland resident, died yesterday at the Home for Incurables. She had been suffering from cancer for the past year.

Mrs. Tansill

Mrs. Tansill, whose rose-growing skill won her many prizes including the Shahan Gold Medal of the Brookland Rose Society, lived with her son, Prof. Charles C. Tansill of Georgetown University, at 3419 12th st. ne.

Born in Alexandria, Va., she attended St. Vincent's Convent School, then at 10th and F sts. nw. After graduation she moved to Texas, where her father, Maj. Christopher Callan, was prosecuting attorney for Gillespie County.

She was married about 1886 to Charles F. Tansill, a veteran of Army campaigns in Texas against the Apache and Comanche Indians, and later president of Fredericksburg College, in Texas.

In 1891 Mrs. Tansill moved to Washington with her husband, who was one of the initiators of the National Chatauqua in Glen Echo, Md., at that time. Active in parish work at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Mrs. Tansill was also a member of the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Besides her son Charles, she leaves two other sons, Prof. Frederick G. Tansill of Benjamin Franklin University, who lives at 1520 Newton st. ne., and Cbl. Xavier B. Tansill, 3130 Wisconsin ave. nw. A daughter, Mrs. Arthur A. Carpenter, editor of the Montrose Ledger, Montrose, Calif., a brother, Guida C. Callan, 3511 11th st. nw., 10 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren also survive.

Requiem mass will be said at 10 a. m. Friday in St. Anthony's Church 12th and Monroe sts. ne., with burial in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Dr. Paul Haensel

Woollcott, Humorist, Dead at 72

Baltimore, Feb. 28 (AP).—William W. Woollcott, humorist and brother of the late Alexander Woollcott, died tonight. He was 72.

Death was due to a heart condition. He was taken to Union Memorial Hospital Sunday after a severe attack.

He was known mostly in the literary field for his appearances in "Bartlett's Quotations," where he appears once more than his brother.

He was not unlike Alex Woollcott in general appearance and habit. Sporting an unruly mass of shaggy white hair, his appearances at the Lyric Theater here for concert recitals in shirt sleeves or sweater became commonplace.

He was born in Washington and lived in Kansas City, North Carolina and Virginia before coming to Baltimore in 1910.

Mrs. John D. Richardson

At Democratic Benefit

The States and Territories Compare and Share Wares, All of Which Are Winners

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THIS DEPARTMENT has just returned in high fettle from the Woman's National Democratic Club Fashion Show luncheon burdened with the following agreeable loot: (1) a boutonniere of kumquats from Florida; (2) a giant pine cone from North Carolina; (3) a gardenia from California; (4) a miniature sack of rice from Arkansas; (5) a spray of artificial cherry blossoms from Michigan; (6) an ear of henna-colored hybrid corn from Iowa; (7) an anthirrium flower from Hawaii; (8) a miniature bale of cotton from Mississippi, labeled as No. 1230 Mississippi Certified Cotton grown by J. L. Hill & Son, Webb, Miss.; (9) a violet from Illinois; (10) a miniature tanbark basket made by an Alaskan Indian; (11) a bottle of Don Q rum, a handpainted flower place card and a tiny doll of seashells, all from Puerto Rico; (12) another kumquat bouquet from Texas; (13) a twist of chewing tobacco from Kentucky; (14) a package of Old Gold cigarettes manufactured in New Jersey; (15) a package of Camels from North Carolina; (16) a carnation from Colorado; (17) a bottle of William Penn whisky from Illinois; (18) a candy rose from the birthday cake of Mrs. Oscar Chapman (who sat at the Hawaiian table); (19) a sample of Odalisque perfume from Garfinckel's; (20) a bag of salt from Utah's Salt Lake; (21) a booklet on Oregon's State parks; (22) a table napkin (in which to wrap the boodle) purloined from the Mayflower.

Inside, making us feel extra pleasant, was (1) a real mint julep served in a frosty highball glass printed in green with the enticing legend "Churchill Downs"; (2) slice of Mrs. Chapman's birthday cake.

Mrs. Truman There

THE LUNCHEON, which from this description may sound a wee bit cockeyed, was one of the most entertaining ever. Each State, Territory and, naturally, our very own District, had its individual table or tables centered with a decoration glorifying either its products, scenery, or some historical monument.

On the dais, Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Max Truitt sat to the right and left, respectively, of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, the club's president. To add to the gaiety, the orchestra fiddled each State's tune, the luncheon itself was deliciously different from the usual chicken-and-peas fare and the fashion show actually showed clothes you'd like to own.

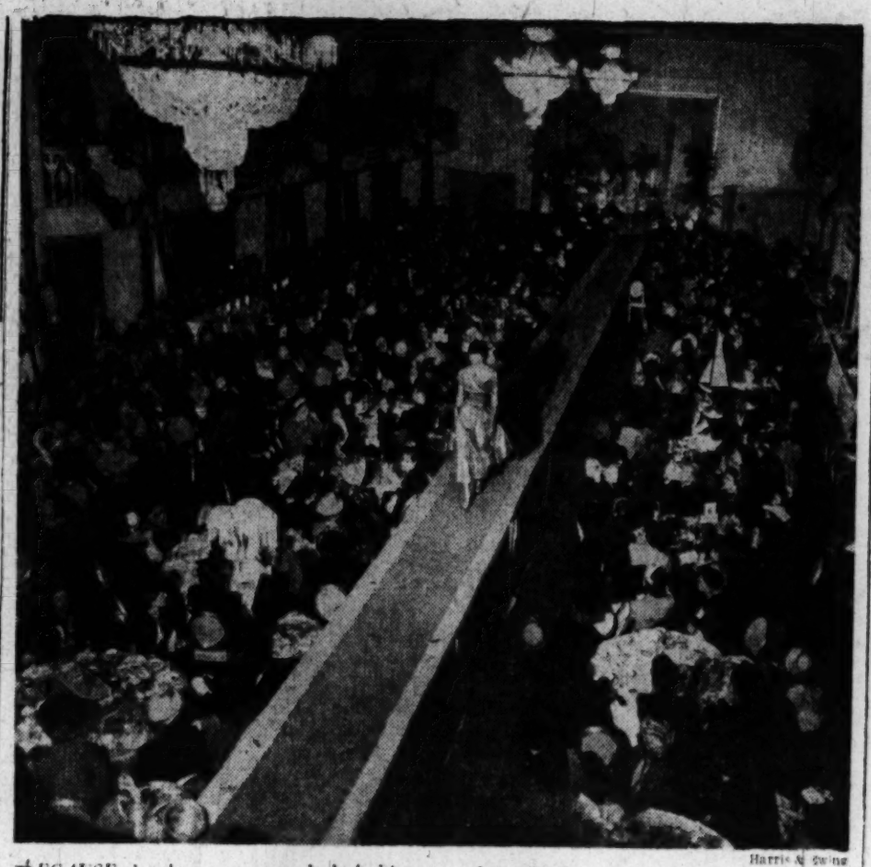
Prize Winners

TABLE DECORATION prizewinners: First prize went to California, with a huge cake covered completely in white carnations and gardenias centered with a gilded map of California edged with sprays of yellow roses. Maryland won a prize for the most perfectly detailed decoration—featuring the Annapolis Naval Academy. In the center was a large toy sailboat—beneath its keel, middies, admirals, academy buildings, the whole fenced in with flags.

The most unique was Louisiana's replica of a showboat with tiny paddle wheels which turned and, on the top deck a miniature calliope. Scattered around it were masks and confetti (from New Orleans' Mardi Gras), crimson magnolia blossoms. The boat itself had been almost entirely made by Mrs. A. C. Burrows, the tall, dark beauty who whips up exotic hats from all sorts of unusual materials.

It would take far too much space to describe each table in detail. Outstanding were Rhode Island's gay miniature of Newport's Baileys Beach; Missouri's small-scale model of its Inaugural float, drawn by brewery Percherons, complete with ceramic models of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn and sprays of haw berries, the State flower; District of Columbia's big cake set with such landmarks as the Capitol and Lincoln Memorial, surrounded by a fence; Connecticut's centerpiece of giddy hats with Yale Towne keys scattered casually beneath them; West Virginia's coal cars, statue of Daniel Boone, glass candlesticks (Mrs. Kilgore, wife of the Senator, insisted we mention that there are 52 glassware factories in her State) all topped with a 2-foot cow modeled in real butter!

Oh, yes, everyone present paid $10 for the privilege of being present—and for once it was worth it!



Harris & Ewing

BECAUSE the throng at yesterday's fashion show at the Mayflower Hotel overflowed from the main ballroom into an adjoining room, the runway was extended so that all could see the parade of clothes. Longest ever used in Washington, it measured 102 feet. Above, a model makes the long trek, clad in a Nettie Rosenstein silk afternoon frock. The show was sponsored by the Woman's National Democratic Club

At Gala Fashion Show

Low Necklines, Tricky Styling Win Applause

By Peggy Preston

NECKLINES plunged from New York to Washington (or so it seemed) in yesterday's gala fashion show at the Mayflower Hotel.

The new dip in fashion won rounds of applause from the hundreds of women attending the luncheon-show for the benefit of the Woman's National Democratic Club. Nettie Rosenstein, New York designer who has a way with necklines and hemlines, sent down some of the most exciting clothes of the season for the event. They were fetching enough to draw attention of the spectators from the riotous State table contest, and that feat in itself proved their effectiveness.

Miss Rosenstein's spring collection lingers lovingly around her favorite "little black dress," the garment for which she is rightly famous. This year she has done some fancy tricks with the neckline, all of them designed to give a "bare at the top" look. When she gets around to the hemlines, she is equally capricious. For afternoon and evening wear they are apt to be several inches higher in front than in back. They may flare on one side, be straight on the other. And every so often the bottom of a skirt springs into a surprise ruffle effect when the wearer is in motion.

The designer uses both the slim and full skirt, but on the whole her collection appears to favor the slim silhouette. Sheath skirts figure prominently for evening, and are sometimes slit from the ankle to above the knee. Over the long, slender skirts, Miss Rosenstein is likely to drape a great pouf of fabric, stiffened so that it stands out from the hipline and trails in a train in back.

Large hats staged a comeback in yesterday's showing. Jaunty sailors, worn back on the head, were shown with suits and street dresses. For afternoon there were big straw cartwheels, laden with flowers, springlike and gay.

Commentator for the show was Ruth Crane, director of women's activities for WMAL-TV and national president of the Association of Women Broadcasters. She leaves for Chicago March 4 to attend the annual convention of AWB, to be held there March 10 to 12.

ON THE FASHION CALENDAR: Angelina Dougherty, merchandising editor of Vogue, will be guest speaker at the monthly luncheon meeting of the Washington Fashion Group, Thursday, March 3, in the Washington Room of the Washington Hotel at 12:45. Mrs. Marion Tolson, regional director, will preside.

"A Teen and Her Diary" is the title of the fashion show which Lansburgh's will present Saturday, March 5, at 11 a. m. in the ballroom at the Mayflower Hotel. Modeling will be 30 teen-age girls from the store's high school fashion board.

Diplomats Give Receptions, Dinners

DR. JOHN M. CHANG, representative of the President of the Republic of Korea, entertained at a reception yesterday at Wardman Park Hotel in commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of the Mansei revolution which eventually established the republic.

On March 1, 1919, the Koreans gathered in public places and read the declaration of independence which had been smuggled through the crowds in the sleeves of school girls' dresses. Homemade flags flew from thousands of hands in this passive revolution, for the 33 leaders warned compatriots there must be no bloodshed, no violence of any kind. The Japs, however, fell upon the crowd, killed 7000, arrested 200,000, and burned others. Later a provisional government-in-exile was established and functioned from Shanghai.

On May 10, 1948, the government was proclaimed a free republic.

Vice President Alben Barkley was a guest at the celebration yesterday and others there were members of the Cabinet and their wives, Undersecretary of State James Webb and Mrs. Webb, members of the Senate and House and a number from the diplomatic corps.

Other guests Monday evening were the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, Mr. and Mrs. John J. McCloy, Mrs. Borden Harriman, the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Reuchlin, Lady Hoyer Millar, wife of the British Minister; Mr. and Mrs. Marquis Childs, the Counselor of the Danish Embassy and Mme. Bang-Jensen, and members of the Swedish Embassy staff.

The Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong and the Luxembourg Minister and Mme. LeGallais were among those in the company last night. Also, John D. Hickerson of the State Department and Mrs. Hickerson; the United States Minister to Romania, Rudolph Schoenfeld; Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, the former Italian Ambassador and Mme. Rosso and members of the Swedish Embassy staff.

Vice President, Truitts, Are Honored at Dinner

VICE PRESIDENT ALBEN BARKLEY, his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Max O. Truitt, were the guests in whose honor Mrs. George Mesta and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George Tyson, entertained at dinner last evening for a company of 24.

Brazilian Military Attache, Wife, honored at Embassy

THE new Military Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Edgar do Amaral, were the guests in whose honor Col. Augusto Fragoso, Assistant Military Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, and Mme. Fragoso, entertained at dinner last evening in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

Members of the Inter-American Defense Board, the Military and Naval Attacher of the South American countries, and representatives of the United States Army and their wives were among the more than 80 guests.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, was in the company, also the Brazilian Minister and Mme. Mello Franco, the Brazilian Minister and Mme. Sarmanho, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Willis Crittenberger, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Alfredo Sanchez, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Leroy Irwin, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Leobardo Ruiz, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Alexander Billing, Maj. Mary Haworth's Mail

Fortyish Lady, Charmed by Princeton Student, Freezes Her Girl Guest, 17, for Staying Out With Him Until 3:35 A. M.; Was This Wrong?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is a hostess in her mid-forties justified in making a real issue of a 17-year-old schoolgirl guest's coming in at 3:35 a. m.? My cousin's daughter, Peg, on vacation from boarding school, was our guest last weekend, at her request, and this situation arose.

The object of Peg's visit was to see a former classmate, I'll call him Tom, who also was in the city for a couple of days. Tom is a Princeton freshman, from an excellent family, has genuine good breeding and is thoroughly approved by Peg's father and my brother. (Her mother is dead.)

Tom met her at the train and came here with her, so that we could meet him before they went out together. The following evening he had dinner with us, and I have never known a nicer person. The first night he deposited Peg on our doorstep at midnight exactly, and I believe he had every intention of doing so the second evening.

Friends and Kin Pooh-Pooh Woman

IN MY HEARING he suggested "a show and a little dancing," to which Peg replied, "That's what you think!" I am convinced that unless considerable persuasion was used, he never would bring a girl home at the outrageous hour of 3:35 a. m.

I didn't take Peg to task for the incident; I didn't mention it; but I am sure the meticulous courtesy with which I treated her the following morning conveyed my displeasure as pointedly as any words could have done. Now my family and even outsiders say I am being ridiculous, that "everybody" does things like that nowadays.

Considering that the school and Peg's father would hold me responsible if anything happened to her, I cannot see that any other stand is possible. But if I am wrong I should like to know, so that I can make suitable amends. A. W.

Woman Hasn't Mother-Sense

DEAR A. W.: You make no reference to a husband, so I assume you are unmarried; ergo, not a mother, hence not familiar with (1) either the "attitudinizing" of teen-agers, or (2) the techniques of sagely supervising their enterprise.

It seems Peg stayed out until 3:35 a. m. of her volition, and to know the "thinking" of boarding school girls is to guess that she did so mostly because she wanted a sensational-sounding report of her "big" weekend to take back to school, and use as the motif of rapt discussion.

Thus to freeze her as a bad guest or bad girl for having done so, if you failed to discuss a logical curfew before seeing her off with Tom, isn't reasonable. As her chaperone, answerable to others for her decorum while in your charge, you had a right, indeed a duty, to inquire into the general drift of their plans, for personal assurance as to where they would be and when, approximately, to expect Peg in.

Woman's Critics Too Lax, Though

IF YOU neglected to indicate, by this correct diplomatic device, that reasonable supervision was afoot, you should kick yourself, not Peg, for her coltish display of poor judgment, which really only hurt her, if it hurt anyone, and signified large deficiencies in her rearing. Thus you were wrong to imply that her adventurous folly was an intolerable affront to you.

If Peg needs protective guidance in re date-behavior, and it seems she does, your unworldly negligence followed by frigid disdain certainly didn't provide it. Rather, it showed you inept as chaperone and blind in the role of judge. Also it killed off the immediate possibility of discussing the issue constructively, in temperate language and spirit that might open Peg's eyes to the serious loss of face she invites, with boys and their parents and adult friends, if she throws "appearances" overboard.

I've said you are wrong; but so are your critics who indulgently argue that all young persons are night owls nowadays. Sensibly supervised teen-age girls aren't "doing the town" until 3 a. m.; although on special occasions, as at formal balls, they may be dancing, with Madame Grundy's sanction, until 3 a. m. To make amends to Peg, you might invite her again; and next time be firm, forehanded yet understanding in the role of hostess-guardian.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

The concert, for the benefit of the Smith Scholarship Fund, will be held in Constitution Hall on March 24

They'll Remember You at Your Worst

EVERY woman should recognize the fact that the person whose appearance is perfect on one occasion, but careless and imperfect on the next, cannot make true claims to appearance perfection even on a half-time basis. With human memories and reactions being what they are, people will remember one of your unattractive, careless appearances much longer and oftener than the times when your looks were superbly beautiful and alluring.

Funds Urged for Israeli Children

Miss Edythe Pekin stressed the need for more funds for the children's village in Israel, Meier Shfeyah, in a talk last night before members of the Washington unit of Junior Hadassah.

The speaker, one of a group of 10 members of Junior Hadassah who spent a year in Israel, spoke at the Jewish Community Center about the children's village which is maintained by Junior Hadassah.

Under the auspices of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, Miss Pekin studied, traveled and worked for a year in one of the Israeli settlements. She said the 430 children in Meir Shfeyah, between the ages of 10 and 16 are given grammar school education as well as training in agricultural and domestic work.

Junior Hadassah, the young women's Zionist organization of America, has adopted a national budget of over $100,000 for the children's village.

St. David's Society To Observe Jubilee

St. David's Society of Washington will celebrate its Silver Jubilee Saturday, March 5, with a banquet at 2600 16th st. nw., at 7 p. m.

The Australian Ambassador Norman J. O. Makin will give the main address and Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Senate Chaplain, will deliver the prayer. Miss Rhoda Watkins, the Society's first woman president, will preside.

Among the guests will be several members of Congress, including Representatives Glenn R. Davis of Wisconsin, Benjamin F. James of Pennsylvania, Thomas A. Jenkins of Ohio, Noah M. Mason of Illinois and Edward H. Rees of Kansas. Reservations may be made with the banquet chairman, William J. Hughes, 27 Sherman Circle nw., Randolph 3747.

Miss Clara Manderscheid, president of the league, will pour and assisting her will be Mrs. Harry Raul, Mrs. Laura McGee, Mrs. E. Hewitt Dimmitt, Mrs. James Pruett, Mrs. S. N. Smart and Mrs. T. J. Huddleston.

Girl Reporter Shows Atlanta What Autoists Are Driving At

By Margaret Walzem

Atlanta, March 1 (AP).—This town is undergoing a sort of one-woman reconstruction period.

If Margaret Shannon of the Atlanta Journal wins, the streets will be safe not only for the homefolk but perhaps even for touring Yankees.

Down here they drive with a fierce Southern pride. There's a minor civil war every day on Atlanta's narrow winding streets.

Margaret, supported by a battery of Journal photographers, took on the entire motoring public, the police department, the traffic judge and the plutocrats of parking.

So far, she's winning hands down.

Newspaper reports of the injured read like battle communiques.

Last October, Margaret began a series of stories as a simple study of the city traffic snarl but soon branched out to hammer away at careless drivers.

The Journal frequently reserved a front page spot for the articles and accompanying picture panels. Hundreds of callers rang the Journal, most of them with pet driving peeves of their own.

Many of Margaret's most loyal readers are traffic policemen.

"We make 50,000 arrests a year," one of them told her, "but how about the convictions?"

The next four days she spent in traffic court, sitting on the bench beside the recorder, watching "too many fines suspended, too many minor fines given for major violations."

Results? Since the series began, parking has been eliminated entirely on 10 major streets in the downtown area and on 4 others during rush hours. Three parking garages have been started and three new parking lots soon will be opened.

The police, for the most part, have been cooperative. Some of them are happy they can now tag cars parked in front of banks and big stores.

"Before, there was too likely to be a kickback from somebody who knew a politician," one of them said.

The Greater Atlanta Traffic Improvement Association, which hadn't met since it was formed a year ago, is now active. It's demanding — and getting — better street lighting, for one thing.

When the idea for the series was originated by Journal President George Biggers, City Editor Bob Collins assigned Margaret to the job because:

"She's one of the best investigative reporters I've ever known."

A native of New Albany, Miss., and a graduate of the University of Missouri, Margaret has worked on the Journal for four years. She was a reporter at one time on the News Herald in Suffolk, Va., the Tupelo (Miss.) Daily Journal and for a brief time on the Arkansas Gazette.

Coming Events . . .

Central Iota Sigma, Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will celebrate its twelfth anniversary, Thursday, March 3, at 8 p. m. in the social hall of the National City Christian Church, 1308 Vermont ave. nw. The program will honor the memory of Frances E. Willard . . . the afternoon group of Kappa Delta Alumnae Association will hold a dessert luncheon Friday, March 4, 1 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Richard Pilkington, 5713 33d st. nw. Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Cornelius Angel and Mrs. Donald Creasy. Mrs. Ernest Klinge, who served as chairman of Montgomery County victory gardens, will give an illustrated lecture on flower gardens and arrangements . . . Adas Israel Sisterhood will hold a hostess tea Friday, March 4, 1:30 p. m., at the home of its golden anniversary donor luncheon chairman, Mrs. Philip Goldstein, 2730 Wisconsin ave. For tea reservation telephone Mrs. Herman Paul, Randolph 4767, or Mrs. Jacob Barkin, Union 1630. Past presidents will participate in the Oneg Shabbat, scheduled by the sisterhood for the same evening in the Adas Israel Synagogue, 6th and I sts. nw.

Doings of the Day . . .

Capitol City School of Nursing Alumnae Association meets 8:30 p. m. in the Gallinger Nurses' Residence . . . Sisterhood of the Northeast Hebrew Congregation's three-day rummage sale opens today in Brentwood Zion Church, 4037 Webster st., Brentwood, Md. About Changing Color of Lamp Shade

Is there any home method of changing the color of a tan leather lamp shade to maroon? If not, where is the best place to have it done? J. F. M.

If the shade is genuine leather you can change the color to maroon by giving it numerous applications of liquid or blood shoe polish which has been thinned with turpentine so that it flows easily. Giving the shade several coats of this, allowing each coat time to soak in will do the job. The proprietor of a firm which specializes in shades and lamps on G st. has generously offered to advise you further on this if you wish. He can be reached by calling NAtional 0140.

Is there a Chinese market in town or preferably in the Maryland suburbs which sells small quantities of Chinese cooking supplies such as seasoning powder, water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, etc? J. F. M.

In the 600 block of H st. nw. are several dealers in Chinese food supplies. Here you will find all the supplies you have mentioned. I know of no such specialty dealer in the Maryland suburbs although often it is possible to get these items in canned form at fancy grocers and delicatessens.

Can a man's unlined soft leather jacket be cleaned satisfactorily? M. B. J.

Smooth leathers can usually be cleaned successfully with a damp cloth and saddle soap. Badly soiled leathers can be washed by using mild lukewarm suds. Use castile or a jellylike oil soap sold in hardware stores. Lay the garment flat on a table with a heavy layer of newspaper under it. Very soiled spots can be brushed with a soft brush. When clean, remove soiled soap by wiping with a damp cloth and pat with absorbent paper to remove as much of the moisture as possible. Place away from heat to dry slowly.

Before entirely dry, rub and work between the hands to soften it. When thoroughly dry apply a good leather restorer or conditioner to restore the lustre. These can be purchased where leather supplies are sold. Follow the directions which come with the product you buy.

Suedes present a more difficult cleaning problem and should be taken to a firm specializing in this work.

Tell me whether or not there is any way to soften and whiten washable doeskin gloves? M. B. J.

Washable gloves can be softened by turning them inside out and rubbing them well with thick suds of an oil soap. Use a minimum of moisture and allow to dry away from the heat. Before entirely dry, work gloves between the hands to soften. Not much can be done to whiten them. Sometimes dusting white talcum powder onto the leather and then rubbing it in well will temporarily make them appear whiter. Be sure to wipe away excess powder.

Does anyone sell unpainted Bavarian or Haviland China or equally lovely egg shell china to be hand painted? Does anyone teach china painting who also has a kiln for its firing? W. T. T.

A Washington department store located between 10th and 11th on F st. sometimes carries a plain china from the same area in Germany from which Bavarian china formerly came. It is now marked "United States Zone," I believe. Also, another department store on D st. between 7th and 8th has had a shipment of fine china from occupied Japan which could be painted. Another source used by china painters is antique shops where plain pieces can sometimes be found.

One woman who gives private lessons in china painting can be reached by calling Dupont 2157. She does not personally own a kiln, but has one at her disposal for firing.

To G. B. and M. B. C. who have inquired about removing grease stains from shoes:

Going over the shoes with a good leather cleaner may remove the spots. If it doesn't, I suggest you take the shoes to a reliable shoe repair man for his suggestions as to the removal. When he sees the shoes, he can tell you how successful he will be in removing the stains.

Can you publish in your column a recipe for Chinese Egg Roll such as is served in at least one Chinese restaurant in Washington? J. R. S.

The manager of the Chinese restaurant on 13th st. which has a reputation for its egg rolls tells me that it is not really possible for their chef to give a recipe for their egg rolls which you could follow. As a matter of fact, they have just one top chef who is skilled in making the rolls and they have had no success in getting him to teach his techniques to the other chefs so that they could create a comparable product. It seems that the recipes these Chinese chefs use are not the sort we use, the success of the product being entirely dependent upon the skill of the chef. Each chef is very proud of his cooking skill and it is an art about which they are inclined to be secretive. However, here's a possibility: "New Chinese Recipes," by Fred Wing, published by United China Relief, contains many authentic Chinese recipes. This book is available in many large public libraries and might contain a recipe for egg roll.

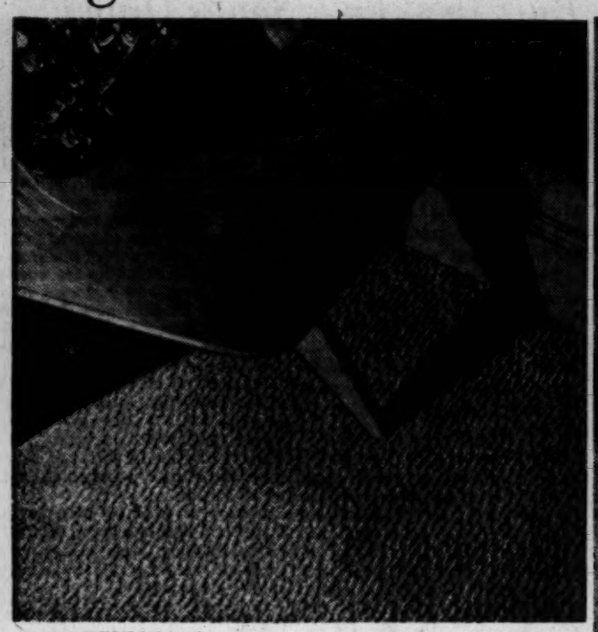
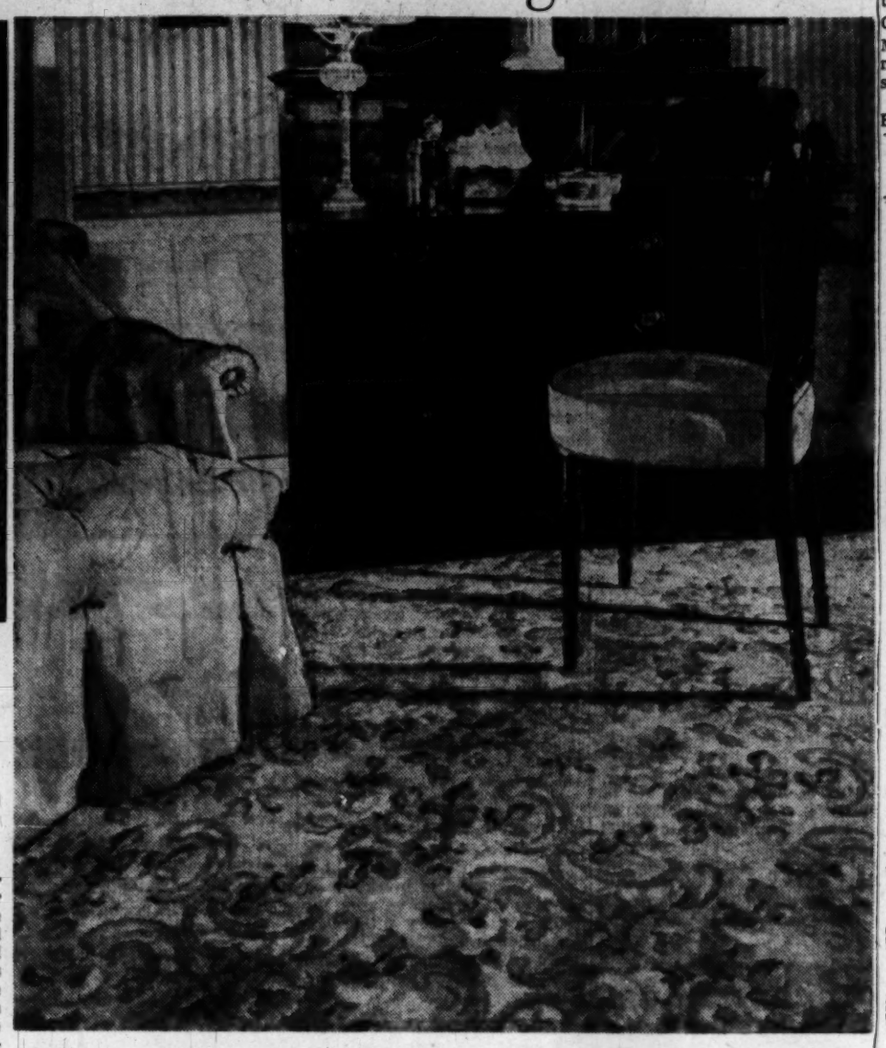
Rug-Makers Take Floor With Something New Afoot



"CHEVIOT," shown above, is the name of a new contemporary carpet of distinction in the popular price bracket. It's sturdily-ribbed loop pile is woven on three levels giving the plain shades a richness of texture



A CARPET with an eighteenth century floral pattern is the feature of this room. With such carpets, which are extremely popular this year, decorators suggest using very few patterns and not too much furniture

Texture Patterns Dominate Display of Carpet Fashions

By Lucia Brown

There's something new underfoot this year.

Fashion is taking the floor with all sorts of fresh trends, weaves, colors and patterns. You could see that with half an eye at yesterday's Carpet Fashion Shows at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The latest carpets—most of them anyway—are the kind you'd love to walk over barefoot. Their thick-piled surfaces sing out a welcome for walking feet. In addition, the ups and downs of the weaving and piling give sculptured effects that are rich and interesting.

Heavenly Blue

"Patterns in texture" items have been on the market before, of course, but never in such large numbers as this year. They are more beautiful than ever, too. Take "Scarsdale," shown at both the afternoon and evening show sponsored by the Washington Floor Covering Club yesterday. It's all the same shade of heavenly blue, but graceful acanthus leaves stand out on its surface because of the different levels of the pile.

Another "sculptured" carpet was in beige with a Papaya leaf effect made by cut and uncut yarn.

In smooth-surfaced rugs, patterns are also important this year—patterns in color. There were charming eighteenth century floral designs yesterday that reminded you of the flower arrangements down at Williamsburg. There were also prim, small-patterned rugs that contrasted sharply with the dashing numbers with modern jungle-flower designs in bright colors.

Speaking of colors, various shades of yellow-green and olive-green will be especially popular this spring in the carpet field, we heard yesterday. Dark bottle green is still good, too. Blue, usually a difficult carpet color, has resolved itself into a fine, amenable hue which suggests wonderful possibilities as a key room color.

Mutation Colors

What they call "mutation" colors are good—for instance, "Putty," a wonderfully versatile beige that's practically a gray and will blend with almost anything. Fine warm rose, cedar, henna and pale penny copper were among the attractive shades seen yesterday, sometimes in combination with each other.

Brilliant shades were in evidence, too, notably in the new velvety nylon rugs. There was a startling scarlet rug and another called "Imperial Jade," a beautiful bright green.

Father's Role Is Important To Daughter

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There is a saying that some people cannot see beyond the end of their own nose, and it would seem this reader is suffering that handicap. She is taking a situation that applies to herself and making it seem to be a universal one. It is not.

"I wish," writes a reader, "that you would write an article about men being partial to their sons. As far as I know there has never been any attention called to this, but certainly there ought to be.

"I have noticed that fathers of both sons and daughters pay more attention to their sons. Men become great pals with their sons and the daughters receive the crumbs. The average father is much more interested in his son than he is in his daughter. He feels the son is more important and he shows it. Is this right? I cannot believe it is. A girl is a human being too, and she needs her father's love the same as the boy."

This sounds as if it might come from a daughter who felt she was not getting sufficient attention from her father.

It is a faulty deduction for it is probable the average man pays more affectionate attention to a daughter than a son, though he may understand the latter better and, because their interests are the same, spend more time with him.

A boy needs a father upon whose conduct he can model his own behavior as a male. He is the boy's hero, the person who orients him and helps him to know what are his manly obligations and how to assume them.

His role toward the developing daughter is just as vital. He gives her the attention she will later get from other men. He tells her how to act, praises her appearance, explains to her how a man "feels" toward her behavior.

The mother helps her to accept her role as a woman and not be resentful of it, but only the father can give her the male reaction toward herself as a female which she needs for self-assurance and self-confidence.

Symmetrical, Not Statistical, Perfection

'Balance' Is the Byword of Beauty

By Ida Jean Kain

The average American girl has a good figure, with measurements not far from streamlined standards. Here are her measurements:

Waist 26.4, bust 33.9, hips 37.4, thigh 21.3, calf 13.3 and ankle 9.2.

But since it's difficult to tell who Miss Average actually is, let's figure measurements proportionately. It's symmetry that counts. In the above measurement lineup the waist is 7½ inches smaller than the bust, and the hips are 11 inches larger than the waist.

Streamlined standards limit the hips to 10 inches larger than the waist, and the waist to a good 8 inches less than the bust measure.

For streamlines, our American girl should take a half inch off the waist and an inch off the hips. That's no trick at all with this trio of exercises . . .

Position: Sitting on floor, legs straight down and wide apart, arms out at sides, shoulder level.

Position: Sitting on floor, legs wide apart, arms outstretched high overhead.

Movement: Keeping a firm grip on middle muscles, hold right leg still and forcibly swing left leg forward—out in front—from the hip, knee straight. Swing back to starting position, then swing leg straight up as high as you can, down to starting position and forward again, and repeat. Leg describes right angle—forward, back to center, up, down. Roll over and swing on left side. Twelve counts one side, then the other.

Let Youngsters Pack Own Luggage

If you are planning a trip with your family shortly, the going-away process can be turned into a social training program for your youngsters.

With modern educators advocating more and more that children "learn by doing," youngsters who, a few years ago, were left at home with grandparents or other relatives, are now a familiar sight at popular vacation spots throughout QJthe country.

Children of 9 and 10 are also not too young to learn about caring for their own possessions. They should be impressed with the importance of keeping clothes and personal effects neat and orderly. If children have their own luggage and personal leather goods it gives them a feeling of responsibility and they should be encouraged to do their own packing when taking a trip.

Polka Dots Important

The fashion landscape this year is more abundantly dotted with polka dots than it has been in years. Dress up a plain navy blue frock with a high collar of white dots on navy or red.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Frequently when a youngster is recovering from a bad cold or some other illness, it's a good idea for him to take a lot of liquid. But if he's in bed and supposed to stay there, it isn't always easy to remember to get water or fruit juice to him regularly.

Here's a little trick that should work. Fill a covered jar with water or juice. Make a hole in the top into which a straw will just fit. If the jar is a small one—a half-pint or a little more—it needn't be marked, for the youngster can drink it all at once. If you use a larger jar, appropriate amounts can be marked on the jar with strips of adhesive tape and the patient can take the responsibility for drinking so much every hour or so.

With younger children, cooperation can be secured readily by pasting at various levels small figures cut from a magazine. They will enjoy lowering the level to the place where Mickey Mouse is standing or where a white horse is prancing. Perhaps you can even work out a combination of figures about which a little story can be woven.

Allergic to Jewelry?

If you are allergic to metals and costume jewelry you wear either causes your skin to break out in a rash or discolor, try painting the inside of the jewelry with colorless nail polish. This will break the contact between your skin and metal and prevent any unpleasant reaction.

Burl Ives' Folk Songs Draw Usual Enthusiastic Audience

By Paul Hume

"Two old maids sittin' in the sand
Each one wishin' that the other was a man."

Dozens of similar couplets and plenty of folksong homespun filled out Burl Ives' session in Constitution Hall last night.

Ives, sporting a rich-looking brown beard, and doing a sporting job of singing over a bad cold, packed in his usual enthusiastic audience. It's amazing as you listen to folksongs to see how many of them blame the womenfolk for all our truobles.

There are women who betray their lovers, women who get themselves fetched off to hell only to be sent back for troublemaking, and finally women who beat their everlovin' men with ladles, hot pokers and what have you. But, as Ives recalled in his final printed song, there's always Frankie and Johnnie. And in that historic case it was not the woman who started things. Of course, Frankie did shoot Johnnie, but not until he and Nellie Bly had themselves an illicit rendezvous.

All this and plenty more comes out when Ives gets to town. Folksongs from every part of our country, and the British Isles are woven into our lives and history. And history in its turn goes into the songs. Children and adults love them, and apparently Burl Ives is the favorite of most of them.

He deserves all the adulation he gets. The latest man to use the famous line, "I like my likker strong and my women weak," Ives does the songs in just the right way: easy style, no preaching, and plenty of fun.

Next year he'll be here for a matinee. And somehow, in spite of the shooting, loose women, and frequent hangings, it's wonderful stuff for the kids.

Don't ask me how it gets into the music department, but I love it.

Immigration Bill Advanced

By The Associated Press

Legislation dropping racial bars from United States naturalization laws passed the House yesterday by a voice vote.

The measure, sponsored by Representative Judd (R., Minn.), now goes to the Senate.

Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Ceylon, Nepal, Bhutan, Burma, China, Siam, the Netherlands Indies, Nauru, New Guinea Territory, the Philippines, Samoa, Yap and other former Japanese islands, Korea and Japan.

Total permitted immigration under the bill would be cut from 153,929 a year to 153,194.

District Seeking To Hold Traffic Safety Record

The District, "with one of the best all-around traffic safety records of the Nation's 14 largest cities in past years," is gunning again for the top place, Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller said yesterday.

Inspector Miller was guest speaker at a lunch meeting of the advisory board of the American Automobile Association's District Division, which was held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miller said he felt that women here had the "edge for safe driving," although men drive three times as much, under more hazardous conditions. Of the 211 traffic fatalities during the past three years, he added, only six of them have been charged against women. Men average more than 66 a year, he concluded.

Virginia Court Hears Arlington Incinerator Case

Richmond, Va., March 1 (AP).—The cast of the Arlington County incinerator was argued today before the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The case involves the question as to whether there was legal competitive bidding for a contract for a new incinerator plant in the county. Six Arlington residents and the Morse Boulger Destructor Co. brought the case to the Supreme Court from Arlington County Circuit Court.

A contract award had been approved by the board to Nichols Engineering & Research Corp. The petitioners contended that the Morse Baulger Co. actually was low bidder with an offer of $628,843 compared with the Nichols bid of $646,757.

Catholic Critic Assails Douglas' 'Big Fisherman'

"The Big Fisherman," a historical novel by Lloyd Douglas, was described as "harmful, unscholarly, inaccurate, distorted and full of egregious blunders" last night at the Critics Forum by the Very Rev. Francis J. Connell (C. Ss. R.) of Catholic University.

Presenting Catholic thought on the best selling books, Father Connell charged that Douglas had "subordinated fact to fancy" in his novel.

"Mr. Douglas attempted to rewrite the Gospel according to his ideas," Father Connell said, "and his ideas differ from those of the Evangelists."

Dr. Ernest H. Ashenbach served as chairman of the Critics Forum. More than 200 persons attended the meeting in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

Democrats' Balk Delays Action on Rent Control Bill

Controls expire March 31 unless Congress acts.

Some Banking Committee Democrats were reported to want a 15-month extension, instead of the two years President Truman has requested. Some of them oppose the Administration proposal that fines and imprisonment be provided for landlords violating rent ceilings. The present law relies on injunction powers for enforcement.

Representative Rains (D., Ala.) said there is no opposition to rent control among the Democrats on the committee, "but our difficulty is writing a bill geared to the present situation."

Officer Dragged By Car in Trying To Arrest Driver

A Washington Terminal policeman, attempting to maintain the arrest of a 21-year-old Mount Rainer, Md., motorist, yesterday was dragged nearly 70 feet by the car of the driver, who escaped and later gave himself up to District police.

According to Terminal Police Sergt. Tyree B. Cunningham, Pvt. Clarence R. Burke, 53, was attempting to maintain arrest of Norman J. Tavan, 2700 Allison st., Mount Ranier, in traffic lanes on the east side of Union Station.

Tavan returned to the District and gave himself up, on advise of his father, David G. Tavan, Sergt. Cunningham said. He was charged with disorderly conduct and assaulting a policeman with an automobile anad was released in $1100 bond for asppearance in Municipal Court today.

2 Held by Police After Row in Diner

A Negro man and woman were arrested on disorderly charges last night by Second Precinct police after a scuffle over the woman's right to sit down while waiting for a "take-out" order of sandwiches at the Capitol Diner, 1022 5th st. nw.

Hilliard R. Johnson, 32, of 1014 4th st. nw., was charged at the precinct station with drunkenness, disorderly conduct and assaulting an officer. Elizabeth Holt, 28, of 357 McLean ave. sw., was charged with disorderly conduct at the Woman's Bureau.

While police in scout cars and cruisers hurried to the scene, Police Pvt. Larry V. Denny of Second Precinct Scout Car 21, said he was kicked in the stomach as he tried to remove Johnson from the diner.

"These good neighbors* deserve our thanks—and our help!"

YOU KNOW them as Joe and Mary, or Tom and Sue. They're your neighbors. Every March they put their own chores and hobbies aside and do one of the biggest jobs of the year.

They're doing just what they ask of you—giving to help others through your Red Cross. But they give their time as well as their money. They deserve our thanks for unselfishly devoting their time to this great cause.

So when the man or woman representing your local Red Cross Chapter comes to your house soon for your contribution, remember the big job they are doing for all of us and the personal sacrifice they're making to get it done.

You, too, can help through Your RED CROSS

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Is Humphrey For Taft? Well, Hartley!

Merle S. Jones, former local radio executive, is now general manager of WCCO in Minneapolis. He sends along a bright item about his new Senator, Hubert H. Humphrey.

On a recent visit to Minneapolis, Senator Humphrey appeared on a WCCO amateur program, and was supposed to sponsor and introduce one of the participants.

The program's producer handed the Senator a card bearing the young lady's name. Humphrey glanced at it, winced a bit, and then informed the radio audience:

"I introduce to you now Miss Winifred (you should pardon the expression) Taft."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

There was a story in the newspapers the other day about a contest to be held between University of Michigan students and a hog; but I have seen no subsequent report of the outcome.

Can you tell me how it came out? Did the Michigan undergraduates out-eat the hog?

Phil Shannon
Mount Jackson, Va.

Dear Phil:

I didn't see anything about this story in the papers, so I can't give you any report on it.

However, in my own undergraduate days at Ohio State I learned that one must never bet against Michiganders.

Bill

GIVE-AWAYS

"Year-old terrier; friendly, loves children." (Sligo 4974.)

"Seven female pups, 6 weeks old; excellent pets and watchdogs." (Wisconsin 7759.)

"Tabby, a beautiful black and white Puerto Rican cat; and Tabby Too, who is 4 months old and looks just like her mother." (Lincoln 8680.)

"Year-old white male cat with black tail; good pet." (Sligo 6114.)

"A home I must find, ere my folks leave the city; I'm 7 months old, a female black kitty." (Ludlow 5772.)

"Four-month-old male pup, part Belgian police." (Emerson 5595.)

SOB STORY

The irrepressible Nate Leiderman wants to know whether news editors will now assign their "sob sisters" to cover Mr. Truman's off-the-cuff speeches.

"IT AIN'T RAINING RAIN"

Jacob Wagner of 114 11th st. ne. passes along an unusual story about "the night it rained beer."

A fellow who lives in the vicinity of Mount Alto Hospital had invited some friends over for a party, and forehandedly laid in a stock of beer for them.

But when his guests arrived, they were puzzled to find that the front porch roof seemed to be shielding them (partially) from a heaven-sent rain of beer.

When they got upstairs, they found out why.

Their host had set the beer out on the window sill—in a paper sack—to keep it cool. A light rain had come up; the rain soaked the bag; the paper gave way; the beer went crashing down.

It was a dry party.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Latest from my inside agents at the Interior Department is that it is felt that this is no time to renew the present concessionaire's contract for the operation of Interior's public golf courses, "because of unfavorable publicity."

Instead, no contract will be awarded for a while, and the present management will just continue to run the courses indefinitely, through the absence of a formally appointed concessionaire.

With the proper amount of goading, I might call this a neat bit of subterfuge.

SHADOW AND LIGHT

I saw the shadows of my feet
As I walked down the dimlit street.
But then I had my old shoes shined
And left my shadows far behind.

Pop Grey.

TOO EARLY OR TOO LATE?

Bill Domdera of 706 S. Barton st., Arlington, Va., observes that one of our afternoon contemporaries inserted an interesting notice in a furniture company's ad recently. The boldface box said:

"Watch for our 4-hour Washington's Birthday Sale! Ad will appear February 21."

Inasmuch as this advance notice appeared on February 24, Bill wonders whether they're a little late for this year or a little early for next.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—The legend is told of King Ibn Saud of Saudi-Arabia and of his anxiety about a possible water shortage in his realm. He therefore allegedly invited K. S. Twitchell, the water engineer, to come to Saudi-Arabia and probe in the soil and the sands for water . . . Twitchell probed and probed, and then had to report his failure. "Alas, alas, I've dug everywhere without success," he sighed to His Majesty. "In all the places I tried, there wasn't a drop of water. Only oil."

Beatrice Lillie's paintings will be given a one-woman exhibition at the Philadelphia Art Alliance, starting March 14 . . . Howard Hughes is planning to team Jane Russell and Robert Mitchum as soon as Mitchum is released.

Ladislaus Vadni, the playwright, went to school with Lajos Dinnyes, the former Prime Minister of Hungary. When Vadni was in Budapest last he visited the then Prime Minister, who arrived late for their appointment. The visitor was led into a large room, in the center of which was a desk whose top was bare of any papers . . . After their reunion the Prime Minister opened a drawer in the desk, took one of the many cigarette lighters, and wrote an inscription to be engraved on it for his old schoolmate. Then he apologized and explained that he had to rush off to attend a luncheon . . . "Nice job you have," Vadni told him. "You come to your office late, have nothing to do but inscribe a cigarette lighter, and then go to a luncheon."

Such is Gregory Peck's affection for the stage that he is rehearsing in "What Price Glory" for a single performance at the Pasadena Playhouse.

Robert Morley, who will perform a scene from "Oscar Wilde" at the ANTA show on Sunday, exacted as a condition of his appearance that Gilbert Miller, the producer, play the part of a servant in it.

James M. Landis, the former dean of the Harvard Law School, who could be admitted to practice in New York merely on motion, instead will take the bar examinations here this week.

Because most of the customers were theater-people, at the Sunday night showing of "Light Up the Sky" for the Actors Fund, author Moss Hart went on in the role of the masseur. He fluffed his one line.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman Twists Tour Suggestion

By Drew Pearson

Only the President's inside advisers know it, but he gave a decidedly different twist to the idea they originally put up to him of stumping the country.

Pearson

Some of Mr. Truman's loyal friends had suggested to him, shortly before the Jackson-Jefferson dinner, that he go on a tour of the Nation in order to keep his contacts with the people, not to rap Congress.

They were frankly afraid that Mr. Truman, sitting in the rarefied atmosphere of Washington and surrounded by too many yes-men, was losing his perspective. So it was suggested that instead of going to Key West for a vacation the President go on a trip through the West perhaps to visit some water-power project or the snowbound areas.

Mr. Truman, however, declined to give up his Key West outing, though he had spent two weeks there shortly before Christmas. And at the Jackson-Jefferson dinner he twisted the original idea around so that his proposed trip becomes a campaign tour against Congress—despite the fact that the present Congress is overwhelmingly Democratic.

Security for Servants

President Truman's program to extend Federal old-age insurance to an additional 20 million persons will not slide through the House Ways and Means Committee as easily as did the bill to extend reciprocal-trade agreements.

Although Chairman (Muley Bob) Doughton of North Carolina agreed to introduce the Administration's bills on social security, he explicitly did so only "as the basis for consideration and discussion."

When current hearings have been completed, the committee will then sit down in executive session to write its own bill, which will probably bear little resemblance to the Truman proposals.

For example, the President includes 5 million farmers, 3.5 million hired hands, and 2.5 million cooks, maids and other household servants in the 20 million total to be covered. Yet members of Congress from rural areas, among them Speaker Sam Rayburn, are convinced that farmers are opposed to social security. And the prospect of a rebellion from ag army of irate housewives, compelled to pay and collect employment taxes on their hired help, makes even the Congressmen from the cities shudder a bit.

Old Age Benefits

On the other hand, increasing social security benefits will definitely be approved. However, Congres will throw out the benefit payments for both sickness of short duration (up to 26 weeks) and for extended disability. Too many people, the Congressmen think, would get sick on purpose.

In addition, old-age retirement for women will probably be reduced from 65 to 60 and a beneficiary will be allowed to earn up to $50 (now $15) per month without losing the right to his Government pension check.

Bureaucrats Dug Snow

The Army did a great job in feeding snowbound civilians and cattle during western storms, but other civilian agencies did equal pioneering jobs with no credit at all—the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management and the Agriculture Department's Forest Service.

Inside fact is that the Land Bureau proceeded with rescue work at a time when the Army at first refused to budge.

What happened was that on January 12, Paul L. Fickenger, regional director of the Indian Service at Billings, Mont., telephoned Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Army District Enginer at Omaha, on January 12 asking the Army for assistance. General Pick, one of the highest officers in the engineers corps and already nominated as chief of engineers, refused to budge.

He said he was most sympathetic with any plan to help snowbound people and cattle, but he had no authority to act. Also he said he had no funds allocated for this purpose.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Land Management also lacked funds or authority. Without waiting for word from Washington, however, its officials proceeded to spend money anyway. Figuring that Washington would reimburse them later, they worked round the clock with no figuring in of overtime.

Taking a chance that Washington later would pay the bill they contracted for snow-removal equipment, etc., which were not authorized. Later, the money came through. But it was the so-called civilian bureaucrats who had the courage to act when the Army hesitated.
